Drunken driving convictions off

SPRINGFIELD — Convictions for drunken driving, the most serious traffic offense short of manslaughter, are declining in Illinois, apparently because motorists are learning about loopholes in the state's implied consent law.

Public health and law enforcement ever increasing numbers that penalties for refusing the required breath tests in a drunken driving arrest are less stringent than the penalties for drunken driving itself.

An ad hoc committee of state agencies and law enforcement groups is working to change the implied consent law to correct what appear to be loopholes.

THE LOOPHOLES apparently have contributed to declining arrests and convictions, according to statistics.

Drunken driving arrests and convictions have dropped since 1972 when the state's implied consent law was adopted, statistics show. But during the same period the number of motorists refusing to take mandatory breath tests has increased.

The findings correspond with those of a 1975 investigation by The Daily Herald into the disposition of drunken driving cases in the Northwest suburbs. The investigation found that two-thirds of those charged with drunken driving were acquitted or won reductions of the charge, avoiding the severe penalties of drunken driving, including the loss of a driver's license for one year, a fine of up to $1,000 and up to one year in jail.

Steve Brown

From our Springfield bureau

The implied consent law requires drivers suspected of drunken driving to submit to two breath tests and provides for a three-month suspension of a driver's license for refusals.

BUT STATISTICS show that more than 60 per cent of those arrested for drunken driving in Cook County are refusing to take the tests this year. In 1973, the refusal rate was 55 per cent, Illinois Dept. of Public Health statistics show.

Illinois State Police information shows the refusal rate has risen from 21 per cent to 42 per cent during the same period.

One state official said motorists often can beat the suspension for refusing to take the tests, a factor revealed in The Daily Herald's 1975 investigation.

The investigation found that about 40 per cent of the Northwest suburban motorists who refused the tests received no license suspensions after court hearing.

A loophole that might be eliminated in the current law is the requirement that two breath tests be given.

"Under the present law, a motorist can flunk the first test, refuse to take the second and only face the refusal suspension rather than the DWI conviction," one official said.

Coupled with the increasing refusal rate is a declining arrest rate, apparently occurring because of police frustrations with the cumbersome technicalities of the law and low conviction rates.

IN 1972, MORE that 12,000 drunken driving arrests were made in Cook County, but fewer than 9,400 were made last year and preliminary statistics this year show a continuing downward trend.

"Let's face it, if a cop has to face four hours administering tests and chances are there will be no conviction, he may decide to give the guy

Africa wrist slap

President Carter announced he has ordered an immediate U.S. arms embargo against South Africa — but no economic retaliation — in response to its "blatant deprivation of basic human rights." The move appeared to be a slap on the wrist as the United States has embargoed the sale of arms to Pretoria since 1962. — Page 3.

Fresh meat all day

Beginning today, Northwest suburban shoppers will be able to purchase fresh meat 24 hours a day, seven days a week. Area butchers approved a contract eliminating the 25-year-old ban on the sale of meat after 6 p.m. in exchange for wage increases estimated to total $110 a week over the next three years. — Page 11.

Happy birthday

The recording industry is 100 years old this year. It was 1877 when Thomas Alva Edison recited "Mary Had a Little Lamb" into a horn attached to a cylinder wrapped with tin foil. Much to his surprise it recited it back and the booming phonograph and record industries were born. — Sect. 4, Page 1.

Drinking age raise requested

After two hours of heated debate with two tavern owners and 20 young people, the Arlington Heights Legal Committee Thursday night recommended the local minimum drinking age be raised to 21.

The decision was made after trustee August Bettman changed his negative vote to agree with Trustee Ralph Clarbour's motion so "the issue can be brought before the full board." Trustee O. V. Anderson abstained.

The village board tentatively is scheduled to consider the recommendation at its Nov. 7 meeting.

Bettman, who last spring requested the issue be considered, said he preferred an ordinance raising the drinking age to 21 only for package liquor stores.

"I AGREE WITH YOU 100 per cent in prisciple but I think we should crawl before we walk," Bettman said before he changed his vote.

"While this is far short of my desire, I feel it could be passed by the board with little trouble. I'm not so sure that making it 21 period will get by the board until other communities do the same."

The drinking age in Illinois for beer and wine was lowered to 19 in 1973 by the General Assembly. Recently 55 communities around the state, including Schaumburg, have used their home rule powers to raise the local drinking age to 21, Bettman said.

Arlington Heights Police Chief Robert Derks said local statistics show a 20 per cent rise in the percentage of 19-and 20-year-olds arrested for drunken driving between 1972 and 1976.

"We have found that when a juvenile is involved in an offense invariably alcohol is a stimulant somewhere along the line," Derks said. "Nine out of 10 cases probably would not have been committed if the juvenile didn't have that stimulant."

TWO LOCAL TAVERN owners disagreed. "If you change the law you're not solving the problem because they're still going to be able to get liquor," said Tom Richards, owner of The Junction, 710 E. Kensington Rd. "I think we're spending too much time trying to change the law and not enough time on solving the broader problem."

Mike Bucelli, owner of The Vail Lounge, 23 W. Campbell St., said a higher drinking age will cause more accidents because local youths will drive out of the community to get liquor.

"You're creating a situation where there will be more driving while drinking," he said. "They're not going to be angels and quit drinking. Unless you raise the age in the whole state this won't do any good."

JACK MATLICK, the man living on the 100-acre farm in Schaumburg Township, may be the key to the mystery surrounding the disappearance of candy heiress Helen Voorchees Brach last February, investigators say. But what he has told them so far has left police and state's attorneys baffled, and the whereabouts of the 62-year-old millionairess are still unknown.

Brach mystery still just that

by PAUL GORES

During the nearly eight months following the disappearance of candy heiress Helen Voorhees Brach, authorities said they have checked every possible lead and angle.

They have gone over Mrs. Brach's financial records. They have studied checks bearing her forged signature. They have checked out a report that she had flown to Florida. They have combed the grounds of her 100-acre Schaumburg Township farm. They have even followed tips from psychics.

But still the 62-year-old Mrs. Brach remains the state's wealthiest missing person.

WITH NO BREAKS or new leads, Glenview police, state's attorneys and Everett Moore, the administrator of the Brach estate, met last week and decided to retrace their steps in the investigation.

But a private eye who was hired by the Brachs last March to investigate the case said such a search probably will be futile.

Ernest Rizzo, who no longer is on the case for the Brach family, said there are only two persons who can solve the mystery — Mrs. Brach herself or her houseman, Jack Matlick of Schaumburg Township.

"Sooner or later something will pop up — a body, namely," Rizzo said. "Probably what's going to happen is it's going to be right under somebody's nose."

IF A BODY does turn up, police are likely to start talking again to Matlick, the last man to say he saw Mrs. Brach alive.

"John Matlick has the key to it," Rizzo said. "There's no doubt in anybody's mind he knows what's happened. He has got the key to the whole puzzle."

The puzzle began last Feb. 17 when Mrs. Brach checked out of the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., following a checkup. State's attorney investigator George Manaco said her physician found no serious medical problems, nothing "terminal or disfiguring or depressing."

But, save Matlick, no one claims to have seen her since.

MATLICK SAID he met her flight from Minnesota and took her back to the airport Feb. 21 when she caught a flight for Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

But there is no record that she got on the plane. She didn't have reservations; she didn't use a

Mrs. Bilandic, 35, 'resting' after miscarriage at home

From Daily Herald News Services

Heather Morgan Bilandic, wife of Chicago Mayor Michael A. Bilandic, suffered a miscarriage Thursday at her home.

Mrs. Bilandic, 35, was treated at Prentice Women's Hospital and a spokesman for the mayor's office said she "is doing well and is resting comfortably."

Mrs. Bilandic's personal physician, Dr. Stuart Abel, performed a dilation and curettage at the hospital and Mrs. Bilandic returned home.

The mayor canceled his schedule for the remainder of the day.

The spokesman said no further details would be announced.

"This is a very private matter and I hope everyone will understand," he said.

The couple was married July 15 at Holy Name Cathedral.

She is the daughter of Graham Morgan, board chairman of United States Gypsum Co. and was the executive director of the Chicago Council on Fine Arts.

She resigned in September so she could devote full-time being Chicago's first lady.

Barker found competent for trial

by DANN GIRE

James E. Barker, Jr. Thursday was judged mentally competent to stand trial for the fatal shooting Aug. 9 of a Prospect Heights man and the wounding of four persons in a Mount Prospect electronic games parlor.

Barker, who turned 17 last month, seemed to pay little attention to the court proceedings in the Cook County Juvenile Court Thursday as Associate Judge Jose R. Vazquez made his brief announcement.

In an attempt to convince Vazquez of Barker's incompetency to stand trial, defense attorney Charles Loverde recounted the testimony so far presented that supported his case.

HE SAID Barker:

- Has attempted to commit suicide at least three times and sought professional help on his own earlier this year.
- Had been struck by a car at age 6 causing his head to swell at least twice its normal size.
- Was born with a large swelling in his head that was attributed to instruments used by doctors to facilitate birth.

Cook County Assistant State's Atty. Richard Michaels will request that Barker be transferred to the criminal court system to be tried as an adult when Barker returns for a Nov. 23 hearing.

Barker is charged with killing Otto Meisenheimer, 21, of 107 E. Camp McDonald Rd., Prospect Heights inside the Just Games Inc., 403 E. Euclid Ave., Mount Prospect.

Four other persons from Arlington Heights, Prospect Heights, and Mount Prospect were wounded by gunfire when Barker allegedly fired an estimated 27 bullets inside the building. Meisenheimer was shot 13 times in the head and chest.

Dear Governor
Our club offers the public the opportunity to be identified by wearing or displaying our exclusive emblem. We do not claim to be professionals on the subject of drug abuse, but we are all human beings striving to make a better world for all of us by helping our fellow man.
Society's interest in liberating man from these evils cannot be too great. Remedies must be sought patiently and steadfastly; the roots of the problems must be evaluated realistically and the full impact of the consequences suffered by individuals and families must be seen in their complete human context. The various forms of drug abuse effect man in his very being: they influence the exercise of his intellect and will and thereby often reduce him to a state of slavery unworthy of human dignity.
We have already received GOODWILL AND BEST WISHES FROM PRESIDENT JIMMY CARTER AND HIS HOLINESS POPE PAUL VI. (See attached.) We understand your official duties would not allow you to be an active member, however we would greatly appreciate the support of your great state. Your comments concerning our club would be welcomed.
Yours truly

All members will receive (our exclusive club emblem in full color) on a comfortable 100% pure cotton T-shirt — plus a bumper sticker for your car and a window sticker for your HOME OR BUSINESS, along with our letter of introduction explaining our club's purpose.

. . . Unfortunately, many persons affected by drug abuse do not know where to find professional help. Efforts such as yours can assist persons in locating drug treatment programs or other professional services suitable to meet their individual needs.
John V. Evans, Governor, State of Idaho

. . . I encourage you to continue your efforts to help people suffering from chemical dependency.
Wendel R. Anderson, Governor, State of Minnesota

. . . I am sure this club is an inspiration and a help to a great many youths. Keep up the good work!
Joseph P. Teasdale, Governor, State of Missouri

. . . I find it most satisfying to know that individuals like yourself and the members of your club have both the concern and courage to tackle this national tragedy.
Jerry Apodaca, Governor, State of New Mexico

. . . I cannot offer enough praise for your attempt to educate individuals in the area of drug abuse. Too often, people remain unaware of the various counseling agencies available to help them. By reaching out to those people, your organization is providing an invaluable service.
Martin J. Schreiber, Governor, State of Wisconsin

. . . I would like to know more about this concept so that I might commend to others as a sincere project.
Cliff Finch, Governor, State of Mississippi

. . . I find it most exciting that citizen's groups such as yours have taken it upon themselves to assist in the fight against drug abuse. You are to be congratulated for your energy, enthusiasm, and dedication to helping others help themselves.
Gary F. Jensen, Governor, State of Pennsylvania

. . . You are to be congratulated on your efforts in the battle against drug abuse. The personal and non-professional approach taken by your members will undoubtedly assist many individuals in solving their problems.
Ed Herschler, Governor, State of Wyoming

. . . Please be assured that we are supportive of activities which will provide professional assistance to those who have a drug problem and who are in need of assistance.
Joseph Garrahy, Governor, State of Rhode Island

. . . I appreciate knowing of your efforts to combat drug abuse in our country. With best wishes,
Ella Grasso, Governor, State of Connecticut

. . . I am in complete sympathy with your objectives. I welcome every individual and group who joins in the fight against the dread plague of drug disease.
Hugh L. Carey, Governor, State of New York

James B. Hunt, Jr. Governor, State of North Carolina

. . . I applaud your efforts to educate and promote understanding in the area of drug abuse.
Julian M. Carroll, Governor, State of Kentucky

. . . Your efforts to educate the public about drug abuse counseling offices in their area is to be commended.
Blake J. Wordal, Office of Thomas L. Judge, Governor, State of Montana

. . . I appreciate very much the report on what you are doing through the Drugs — No Thanks Club to give those who are in need of help someone to talk to and to advise on professional assistance. I congratulate you and wish you well as you proceed in this most worthwhile cause.
Otis R. Bowen, M.D., Governor, State of Indiana

. . . Your purpose is honorable and it is most gratifying to me to know there are people helping people struggle with their own humanity.
David Pryor, Governor, State of Arkansas

. . . You are to be commended for your involvement and outstanding efforts in providing assistance for those persons involved in drug abuse. I am pleased to have this opportunity to express my congratulations. I know your work is appreciated by many people.
David L. Boren, Governor, State of Oklahoma

John D. Rockefeller IV, Governor, State of West Virginia

Raul H. Castro, Governor, State of Arizona

. . . Our country's drug problems are certainly complex and widespread. Your efforts to deal with them are commendable and I wish you all success in these and future endeavors.
Pierre S. DuPont, Governor, State of Delaware

. . . I hope that you will have the best of fortune in your efforts. Several years ago we had programs operating in our state that seemed to be of a similar nature and which we think did good work at that time.

House OKs Social Security tax increase

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Thursday passed a Social Security tax increase bill that also would allow retired persons to earn unlimited wages without losing any of their retirement benefits.

Retired persons under age 72 now may earn only $3,000 in wages free and clear. Above that they lose $1 in Social Security benefits for every $2 earned until their entire benefit is eaten up.

The House voted 260-140 to raise the limit to $5,000 in 1980, $5,500 in 1981 and to eliminate it altogether in 1982.

THE OVER-ALL bill, which passed 275-146, is designed to keep Social Security operating fully in the black to the year 2010 and to wipe out most of its projected deficit to the year 2050. Without such legislation, the program would run out of money in the early 1980s.

Rep. William Ketchum, R-Calif., who proposed the retirement income relaxations, said many retirees have to work to supplement their pensions and keep up with payments and taxes on their homes.

He urged members to "talk to retired people who eat dog food because they are not able to afford anything else."

REP. AL ULLMAN, D-Ore., floor manager of the bill, said it would change Social Security "from a retirement program," in which only those who have largely stopped work receive benefits, to "an annuity program" under which they receive benefits merely by reaching a certain age.

Ullman said he hopes some limit will be imposed when the bill goes to conference with a Senate version that would raise the limit to $6,000 in 1979.

To pay for removing the earnings limit, the House added 0.1 per cent to the Social Security tax rate every year beginning in 1981, on top of steep increases already contained in the bill.

The bill adds no new tax increases, beyond those already scheduled, for workers earning less than $16,500 until the year 1981 — after the next presidential election.

BUT HIGHER INCOME workers would begin to feel the additional bite next year and their increases would be steeper. The tax paid by a $43,000 employe would triple by 1987.

The bill also sets retirement benefits for the next 75 years so each new generation of retirees should be able to count on the same relative standard of living from Social Security as retirees in 1976.

It abolishes several differences in treatment of the sexes; for example, widows no longer would lose benefits when they remarry, and elderly divorced husbands could get the same benefits as elderly divorced wives.

A person who was divorced after 5 years of marriage, instead of the present 20, could apply for a spouse's benefit.

Generic foods pass wallet, taste tests

Joyce Lofstrom

Byline report

Flavor, that's what food is all about. Whether it's peanut butter, corn flakes or peas, people choose the foods they enjoy by the dictates of their taste buds.

Generic foods, not available at area Jewel food stores, are priced lower than store or national brands, an asset any consumer values.

But consumers may wonder why the generic products are cheaper than the national brands.

In addition to the plain labeling, other packaging costs have cut such as the pop tops on soft drink cans and the fragrance in detergents. Standard instead of fancy grade fruits and vegetables are used and canned fruits contain less sugar than fruits in heavy syrup.

HOW DO THE generic foods taste? Only individual preferences can answer that question as consumers compare the generic to their regular brands. But first reactions to several of the generic brands may give a preview to some of the food flavors.

• Broken grapefruit sections — what you read is what you get in the case of grapefruit, it is pieces instead of whole slices. The fruits are canned in light syrup which means there is less sugar than in sections canned in heavy syrup. But less sugar also means a more distinct grapefruit flavor, a feature some consumers may prefer.

• Yellow cling peaches — again, the secret is in syrup with less sugar and the not-so-perfect slice of peach. The peaches, available in slices and halved, are useful for eating and baking. the peach color is bright but if you are serving a fruit cup at a dinner party where appearance is sometimes important, you probably will want a peach with a uniform look.

• Applesauce — the generic product has a true apple flavor. It contains less sugar and unlike the national brands, it is made from several instead of one variety of apple. Don't worry about the applesauce running across the plate because it has a texture and consistency.

Another difference occurs during the manufacture of the peanut butter, Gerald L. Hansen, vice-president of Jewel Grocery Merchandising, said. Other peanut butters are made with whole peanuts; generic peanut butter uses broken peanuts, for a price savings. There is no difference in flavor, Hansen said.

• Tomatoes — A standard grade tomato is used for the generic product which accounts for the prices instead of whole tomatoes found in the can. A standard grade tomato may break down more quickly in the can than a higher grade tomato, Hansen said. "But the generic can is packed as full as any other can of tomatoes."

• Peas — Pick generic peas for casseroles and other combination dishes. In the product tasted, the pea color was a dull green, the texture tough and the flavor only slightly sweet.

Nutritional labeling now appears on 20 to 25 per cent of the items, but more will be added to other products as the information becomes available.

Consumers with questions about generic products can ask home economists at area Jewel stores, said Julie Rulifson, home economist at the Des Plaines store, 1500 S. Lee St. In addition unit pricing and information pamphlets appear in the generic product aisle.

The absence of an extensive advertising campaign has been one of the factors for the low prices of generic products.

GENERIC FOODS and other products line shelves of local Jewel stores as part of a new program to provide lower cost items to customers. Consumer reaction was varied Thursday in the Des Plaines Jewel, and as this shopper indicates, discrimination remains a part of grocery shopping, even in the generic section.

Worth a try, consumers say of idea

Four Northwest suburban Jewel Food Stores now make available generic food and grocery items, a marketing concept that is welcome to some consumers and at least worth a try to others.

The four local stores: 217 Irving Park Rd., Streamwood; 345 Seymour, Mundelein; 1500 S. Lee St., Des Plaines; and 1323 W. Golf Rd., Schaumburg, had new customers trying the generic products Thursday after Jewel officials a day earlier announced the new program.

Generic products are displayed in a separate section and are packaged in cans or boxes with only a plain white label. They carry only common or generic names, such as tomatoes or peaches, insead of brand titles. Although the foods do not have the brightly colored labels of the national brands, they offer consumers the same nutritional value but at a 10 to 35 per cent savings, Jewel officials said.

THE DAILY HERALD visited the Jewel store in Des Plains to talk to consumers about their reactions to the generic food line.

"Every cent I can save, it's worthwhile to me" said Mrs. Walter Hudson of Des Plaines, a regular shopper at the store. Mrs. Hudson said she shops for herself and her husband and buys a variety of the generic products, especially canned fruits.

"I started buying generic foods about six months ago," said Dulcy Simplins, a Chicago resident shopping on her lunch hour. "It serves the purpose I need — eating."

Mrs. Simplins said she wanted to see the difference between generic and brand name products. "I have tried a lot, but maybe I'll branch out and try others." Buying both food and household products, Mrs. Simpkins said she finds the quality satisfactory.

Consumer reaction has been favorable, said Harold Edwards, grocery manager of the Des Plaines store, where generic foods have been available for the past three months. "About 95 per cent of the shoppers pick up something from the generic aisle," Edwards said.

PRICE WAS the biggest selling point among the shoppers interviewed by The Daily Herald. "I haven't really tried it, but my grocery bills are high," Donna Vogt, Des Plaines, said.

Other shoppers, buying generic products for the first time as a result of recent publicity, were more cautious, selecting only one item.

"I heard it on television," Pearl Green of Des Plaines said. "All I can do is try it."

However, some shoppers still prefer the brand name products "I like the Freestone peaches; these are cling," Dorothy Kammid of Des Plaines said.

Customers may choose from 88 generic products including canned fruits, vegetables, household goods, paper products, soft drinks and dog food. New products will be added as the demand increases, officials say.

Carter slaps arms embargo on S. Africa

by HELEN THOMAS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter announced Thursday he has ordered an immediate U.S. arms embargo against South Africa — but no ecnomic retaliation — in response to its "blatant deprivation of basic human rights."

"We still hope the South Africans will not sever themselves from the rest of the world and will work in an evolutionary way toward the establishment of human rights," Carter said at a news conference.

His first move to respond to South Africa's racial crackdowns seemed a comparative slap on the wrist, since the United Staes has embargoed the sale of arms to Pretoria since 1962 and, according to Pentagon sources, the new order would affect little more than the sale of spare parts for military cargo aircraft.

STATE DEPT. officials, however, said it would also cover a "gray area" of equipment, such as computers, not affected by the earlier embargo.

At a news conference that ranged over many other subjects, the President also said Congress' attempts to work out a conservation-oriented energy policy amounts to "a test of the national will," and suggested he might compromise by accepting natural gas price ceilings higher than he wanted.

He also gave a somewhat more restrained appraisal of prospects for concluding a new Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty with the Soviets, saying "the general terms of a settlement" might be worked out soon but a detailed treaty, ready for signing, will take longer.

On the South African issue, Carter fulfilled predictions he would approve no more than a tightened arms embargo as a first step in hopes the white minority Pretoria regime might relent in its repression of anti-apartheid blacks without the pressure of an economic quarantine.

"MY DECISION has been to support strong sanctions against the sales of weapons to South Africa," he said. "This will be carried out immediately by us and my prediction is that the U.N. Security Council will adopt similar measures and they will be overwhelmingly supported by the nations of the world."

Asked whether he was considering any more far-reaching economic blows — such as a full or partial trade embargo, or restrictions on U.S. investments in South Africa — Carter said, "We are not deciding at this point on any sort of general trade or investment embargo.

"The additonal steps that might be mandatory, beyond an arms embargo, have not yet been decided."

The President rejected the angry claims of South African white leaders that the United States has been meddling in its internal affairs by its efforts to promote progress toward racial equality.

CALLING THAT criticism "not legitimate," Carter said, "I do feel it's proper for us to deplore, not only in South Africa but in other nations as well, the blatant deprivation of basic human rights."

He said the South African government forced his hand last week when it "took away the rights of the free press and eliminated the organizations themselves which had been working for racial equality."

"It is important that we express our deep and legitimate concern about those actions."

In a crackdown designed to cut off growing domestic unrest over the death of imprisoned black anti-apartheid leader Steven Biko, the Pretoria regime banned a number of anti-apartheid organizations, closed two black newspapers and arrested civil rights advocates of both races.

Despite his decision to defer stronger action, however, Carter indicated he reserves the right to do so in the future if South Africa does not respond to early pressures.

"I think it is proper for us to either enhance or reduce or trade with a country depending on its own policies," he said.

"It is important for us to decide when we should or should not sell weapons, when we should invest in another country, or whether government programs such as loans or grants should apply to another country."

But legislative remedies are not expected until next year, said State Rep. James Von Boeckman, D-Pekin. He is sponsoring a bill that would require one breath test rather than two and make other changes in the law.

"I think everyone has to agree Illinois has the worst DWI law in the country," he said.

Dentist sister, mom in contempt of court

The sister and mother of Dr. Zygmunt Bejnarowicz — who disappeared with his son rather than give the boy to his mother — were named in contempt of court petitions Thursday. A lawyer for Margaret Bejnarowicz, the 7-year-old boy's mother, said the dentist's sister and mother failed to appear at a deposition hearing Wednesday. The lawyer wants to question them about the whereabouts of Bejnarowicz and the boy. Bejnarowicz reportedly fled from the United States in August after a judge granted custody of the child to his mother. Bejnarowicz was seen in Zurich, Switzerland, earlier this month.

Pierce, D-Highland Park, said Tuesday he will appear before the Democratic state slatemaking committee in Chicago, Tuesday, as a candidate for state treasurer.Pierce, whose 32nd District includes Lake County Buffalo Grove and Wheeling has been mentioned as a possible Democratic candidate for attorney general as well as treasurer.

Pierce presented himself to the slatemakers in 1975 as a candidate for attorney general but lost the party's endorsement that year to former State Sen. Cecil Partee.

Brink's Fargo cited for antitrust

Brink's Inc., and Wells Fargo Armored Services Corp. have been named in a civil antitrust complaint, charging they entered into a nationwide conspiracy to fix prices and allocate territories for armored car services, Illinois Atty. Gen. William J. Scott said Thursday.He filed the complaint in Atlanta, where Wells Fargo is based. Brink's is based in Chicago.Scott seeks recovery on behalf of all direct purchasers of armored car services in Illinois. The state of Illinois alone purchased more than $400,000 worth of armored car services from one or the other defendent since 1971, Scott said.

The complaint specifically alleges violations of federal antitrust laws. It follows Justice Dept. indictments of the two companies for similar practices, Scott said. The conspiracy began in 1968 and continued through August 1975, Scott said.

A complaint has been filed with the Illinois Judicial Inquiry Board against a Cook County Circuit Court judge who refused to allow a prosecution witness to testify against a bus driver accused of molesting a 10-year-old girl.Judge Jack G. Stein ruled Robert Gonsowski, who was employed by the Illinois Bureau of Identification for five years before he resigned last April, could not testify as an expert witness on tests he conducted on the girl after the alleged attack. Stein said Gonsowski was not an expert on the tests he performed. The complaint was lodged by State's Atty. Bernard Carey.

Thompson president bid denied

Lt. Gov. Dave O'Neal, in an interview published Thursday in his hometown newspaper, said Gov. James R. Thompson told him "he (Thompson) is not going to run for president in 1980." But under questioning, a Thompson spokesman quoted the governor as telling O'Neal he has no "plans" to run for president in 1980, a softer statement than that made by O'Neal in the interview. Fred Straub, O'Neal's spokesman, said O'Neal talked to Thompson before being interviewed by the Belleville News-Democrat. O'Neal told the newspaper, "He (Thompson) said the other day he is not going to run for president in 1980. I talked to him yesterday to make sure on that. He is not going to answer any more questions on it because it takes away from the issues at hand."

Thompson was not available for immediate comment but aide James Williams said, "I talked to the governor and what he told O'Neal was that he is a candiate for governor in '78 and he has no plans to run for president in 1980."

State employes to be fired

Gov. James R. Thompson says more than 200 state employes have been removed from welfare rolls and will be fired. He will fire the employes — whether or not there is enough evidence to prosecute them for criminal fraud — Thompson said Thursday. The employes' accepting public aid money while ineligible is a good enough reason to seek their firing, he said. At least 207 state employes have been removed from welfare rolls. Most held clerical jobs and were paid about $650 a month, Public Aid Director Arthur F. Quern said.

Public aid grants were reduced for another 70 employes who were found to be getting too much money, Quern said. Grants to eight employes were increased because they were receiving less than they were entitled to, he said.

Regner pushes override of social agency aid veto

State Sen. David Regner, R-Mount Prospect, will try to persuade the Illinois General Assembly to override Gov. James R. Thompson's veto of legislation designed to aid local nonprofit social agencies.

A bill sponsored last spring by Regner would provide more financial assistance to agencies such as the Clearbrook Center for the handicapped in Rolling Meadows to compensate for the large number of clients being assigned there by the state.

The bill, vetoed by Thompson for fiscal reasons, would require the Illinois Dept. of Mental Health to pay the full cost of social and vocational rehabilitation and other activities for clients placed by the state.

The bill won Senate approval last spring in a 42-2 vote and the House approved it 136-0, Regner said. He said he plans to bring up the bill in the next few weeks during the legislature's special session.

WHEN REGNER first presented the bill, he said the Dept. of Mental Health prefers to place clients in communities that offer social activities and rehabilitation rather than to confine them in mental institutions.

But the state is filling up community-supported facilities without providng extra money to handle the extra people, Regner said, adding: "It's extremely unfair. It penalizes those community centers that do the best job of raising money locally."

Marc Savard, executive director of Clearbrook, said the center is losing money because it is absorbing the cost of new clients referred by the state and those it accepts from profit-making residential facilities.

Savard said the cost of providing services for trainees at Clearbrook's vocational workshop exceeds $300 a person, but the state gives the center only $64 a month for each new client.

All A's are not equal

Weighted grading for Dist. 214?

One "A" on a High School Dist. 214 report card may not be as good as another next fall.

If all goes smoothly, the school district in September will switch to a weighted grading system that will reward students taking more difficult courses.

The goal is to encourage students to enroll and stay with more challenging classes and make the distinctions of valedictorian and salutatorian more meaningful, school officials say.

Graduation requirements will not be altered by the new grading system.

UNDER THE WEIGHTED grading system, classes will be ranked either 4, 5 or 6, with easier classes falling into group 4 and harder ones into group 6.

A student enrolled in the district's most difficult classes will get six points for an "A" and five points for a "B" while a student enrolled in classes of average difficulty will get five points for an "A" and four points for a "B."

An "A earned in one of the district's easier classes will be worth only four points, the equivalent of a "C" in a class ranked difficult.

"Right now,if a kid is getting a "C" in calculus, he might drop the course because it knocks down his grade-point average and moves him out of the top 5 per cent of his class," said Marvin Christensen, district coordinator of research and testing. "If the class were weighted, his "C" would be as good as a "B" or even an "A" in other classes and he might stay with it."

BY DIFFERENTIATING between straight "A" students, the weighted grading system also serves as a hedge against grade inflation, Christensen said.

Rather thsn having 12 straight "A" valedictorians, district schools will award the distinction to the student with the highest grade-point average, he said.

The difficulty with the weighted grading system is deciding how each class will be weighted.

A committee of teachers, counselors and administrators next week will begin drafting guidelines for weighting classes. Once the guidelines are agreed on, committees of teachers from different academic areas will recommend weights for specific courses.

No more than 20 per cent of the district's classes are to be weighted differently than average, Christensen said. Those that are weighted 6 probably will be junior-and senior-level courses having several prequisites and requiring a high level of independent student work, he said.

HOPEFULLY the guidelines established by the committee will be such that noncollege preparatory courses such as office practice can be weighted heavily with calculus or physics, Christensen said.

If the new grading system is to take effect in September, course weights must be established by February or March so students can take them into account when planning their class schedule for 1978-79, he said.

Whether the change in grading systems will be enough to entice students to opt for more challenging courses and "stretch their minds" rather than just "slide through" is something administrators are anxious to see.

The way things are now, there's a Gresham's law in education that has the less demanding courses driving out the more demanding courses just as bad money drives out good money, said Donald Fyfe, assistant principal at Elk Grove High School.

Lecturers at library

Arlene Eskilson, assistant professor of sociology and anthropology at Lake Forest College, will speak on "Gender and Role Expectations and the Middle Years" at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the Arlington Heights Memorial Library, 500 N. Dunton Ave.

Charles Maland, assistant professor of English at Lake Forest College, is scheduled to speak at 8 p.m. Nov. 8 on "The Middle Years and the Silver Screen."

Both lectures are part of a series produced by the college's office of continuing and graduate education, in cooperation with the libraries in the North Suburban Library System and with the support of the Illinois Humanities Council and the National Endowment for the Humanities.

Reassessments won't be severe

Upcoming reassessments in four Northwest suburban townships will be less severe than those in townships reassessed last year, an official of the Cook County assessor's office said Thursday.

Gerald McNally, director of appraisals, predicted an average residential assessment increase of about 15 per cent — roughly half of average 1976 assessment increases in some townships.

But McNally cautioned his prediction is merely an approximation. Mathematical computations to be performed by computer could greatly affect the reassessments, he said.

PROPERTIES IN Maine, Schaumburg, Elk Grove, Hanover and six other Cook County townships are undergoing reassessment in 1977. Notices of assessment changes will be mailed in late December or early January, the assessor's office says.

Property owners in Maine Township already have begun to organize a tax protest of anticipated huge assessment increases. A group calling itself Homeowners United seeks to generate pressure on legislators to roll back the increases, before anyone knows what the increases actually will be.

The fears stem from the 1976 reassessments in Wheeling, Palatine, Northfield and seven other Cook County townships.

In Wheeling Township, assessments rose an average of 28 per cent and tax bills increased an average of 27 per cent. Some individual tax bills doubled or even tripled from the year before.

Property in those townships was assessed for tax purposes up to 17 per cent of its fair market value. Previously, the county used a system in which the value of a home for tax purposes actually declined with time. As a result, many older homes were underassessed.

the committee to recommend that the drinking age be raised. Her son, Wesley H. Swartz, 38, of Chicago, was killed on Labor Day in a hit and run accident near Arlington Heights she believes was caused by an 18-year-old who was drinking.

"IT SEEMS TO ME completely unfair that this happened," she said. "Something is wrong and something has to be done about it."

Most of the young people present Thursday, including Dan Burns, 23, of Rolling Meadows, insisted that raising the drinking age will not solve any problems.

"This will only exchange one problem for another," he said. "There was a lot more pot going around when I was younger and now instead the kids are drinking more."

A 20-year-old Mount Prospect man who did not want to be identified said "every 19-and 20-year-old is just going to turn against you and try harder to drink if you pass this. You're taking away one of our privileges and we don't like it."

"We have to do what's best for 71,000 residents of Arlington Heights and not just what's best for one age group," Bettman said. "The majority of young people in Arlington Heights don't cause trouble and it's a shame that we have to punish all for the mistakes that have been made by a few."

Adventures of your Garbageman

Please Put Motor Oil at the Curb

Some residents change their own motor oil and give us the old oil to dispose of, which sometimes creates a problem.

We're willing to handle it, as a service to customers — but only if it's in a tightly-sealed container, or is placed at the curb. Either method will eliminate a recurring problem which is not really the fault of our men.

The problem is this: At the back door, our man must lift and invert the garbage can in order to dump it into his carry-can. When a loosely-sealed can of oil is so dumped, too often the cover pops off, and oil is splashed on the driveway.

The way to avoid this is either to make positively sure that the oil-can cover is sealed "bounce-proof" — or better yet, please put motor oil at the curb, where it can be picked up and tossed into the truck without need for dumping it into a carry-can — and thus, no problem.

We'll appreciate your cooperation.

Confessed killer given death wish

Confessed killer Daniel R. Webster got his death wish Thursday night when a jury of three women and nine men sentenced him to be executed in the gas chamber for the murder of his wife. The jury, after being taunted by Webster, deliberated an hour and a half before deciding to sentence him to die rather than life imprisonment.

The slim, 5!-year-old Webster sat passively as the jurors answered that they had considered all the legal requirements before deciding to sentence him to death. Earlier, he had told the jury, "If I'm not given a death sentence, you are a disgrace to the state of North Carolina." The jurors answered "yes" to the question of whether they believed beyond a reasonable doubt the murder was aggravated, heinous and atrocious. They agreed there were mitigating circumstances in the murder, but felt the aggravating circumstances outweighed the mitigating circumstances.

"You're looking at a cold blooded murderer and if I had it to do over again, I would probably do the same thing and I don't think I would think any more about killing you than I did her," Webster told the jury a few hours before they began deliberating.

James E. Ray guilty of jail break

James E. Ray was found guilty Thursday night of escaping from the Tennessee prison where he is confined for the murder of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., and received an additional sentence of one to two years. Ray, who received up to five years on the escape charge, testified he broke out of Brushy Mountain State Prison near Petros June 10 because he thought that was the only way he could win a new trial for the King assassination.

The sentence was added to the 99-year term Ray received after pleading guilty to the 1968 sniper slaying of King in Memphis. "It was my intention after I was out a couple of months to get in touch with the U.S. Attorney General, Griffin Bell, to arrange for a tria in the King case," Ray said. A jury of nine men and three women deliberated 2 hours and 55 minutes before returning a verdict.

'Sam' attorneys seek venue change

Attorneys for David Berkowitz, the suspected "Son of Sam" killer, Thursday said they intend to ask for a change of venue from Brooklyn, where the former postal worker is charged with murdering a 20-year-old woman. A state judge ruled last week Berkowitz is mentally competent to stand trial for the .44 caliber shooting death of Stacey Moskowitz — the last victim of "Son of Sam." At similar competency hearings Thursday in Queens, where Berkowitz is charged with two more murders, Ira Jultak and co-counsel Leon Stern said they planned to file a motion with the Appellate division of State Supreme Court by Nov. 25 to have the trial held outside Brooklyn.

Red Adair conquers raging oil fire

Daredevil oil field firefighter Red Adair conquered a raging blaze at the Navy's vast California desert oil reserve Thursday, snuffing out a flaming oil well as if he were putting out a candle. With two carefully placed plastic explosives, Adair set off a blast above the well which exhausted the oxygen in the air. The 38-foot tower of flame quickly diminished and went out. Oil continued to pour out of the well onto the dry California desert 140 miles north of Los Angeles in the Elk Hills Reserve, where the government has earmarked millions of barrels of underground oil for defense. Adair and his aides set about capping the well. The fire had been burning since late Tuesday when an underground explosion killed three men on the well's 150-foot tower.

Biko inquest opens but ends quickly

A formal inquest into the death in jail of black leader Steve Biko opened Thursday but was immediately adjourned in a maneuver effectively silencing the Biko family. The presiding judge said Biko apparently did not die of natural causes and one prosecutor suggested criminal charges might be filed. Pretoria's chief magistrate, M. J. Prins, opened the inquest unexpectedly Thursday and immediately adjourned it until Nov. 14. Sources close to the Biko family said the inquest was originally intended to open Friday but was moved up one day to put the affair under jurisdiction of the courts for 17 days, thus banning all public statements concerning the case.

Prins said that from "certain information" provided by Transvaal Attorney General Jacobus Nothling it appeared Biko's death was not natural. Legal experts said the decision to hold an inquest was significant because it provided the Biko family lawyers the opportunity to summon witnesses. Biko was arrested in Port Elizabeth in Eastern Cape Province Aug. 5 but was transferred to Pretoria 750 miles away the night before his death. Biko became the 20th black to die in police custody in 19 months on Sept. 12 and his death touched off international and national protest.

Three German terrorists buried

Three Baader-Meinhof terrorists who died in prison last week were buried side by side Thursday in a fog-shrouded West German cemetery, mourned by hundreds of sympathizers who wore black masks to avoid police scrutiny. Police who surrounded the cemetery with spike-studded roadblocks and machine guns to check the identity cards of all who entered clashed briefly with a group of mourners. Several young people were arrested and one officer was reported injured. Pastor Helmut Ensslin, father of one of the guerrillas, refused to preside at the funeral seervice in Stuttgart and said he believed his daughter, Gudrun, was "assassinated" in prison.

Job market for teachers shrinking rapidly: Cronin

Illinois colleges last spring prepared 12,000 teachers, but there were jobs in state public schools for only 6,800 of them.

This grim picture of the teacher supply and demand was revealed Thursday by State Schools Supt. Joseph Cronin, who described a rapidly shrinking job market for would-be teachers.

The outlook is especially bad, Cronin said, for elementary school teachers and graduates in the social sciences, foreign languages and physical education.

'There are jobs for only 30 to 40 per cent of the people who graduate from those programs," he said.

Cronin said state universities have made major efforts to reduce the number of teachers being trained, an attempt to offset the job shortage resulting from a decreasing student population.

College students apparently have gotten the message about the poor job prospects because the number of graduates seeking teaching certificates in social studies and English dropped by more than half in the last school year, Cronin said.

There was good news, however, for those who want to teach industrial arts, physics, chemistry and possibly mathematics. In those fields there are still not enough teachers to fill the available jobs, Cronin said.

Klepak makes bid to oppose Crane in 12th District

Arlington Heights attorney Robert M. Klepak was the only person to appear before the 12th Congressional Democratic Committee Wednesday night, strengthening chances that he will be endorsed by the party to oppose U.S. Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-12th, in 1978.

Klepak, 32, was "enthusiastically received" by five Democratic township committeemen from Cook County and Lake County Democratic Chairman Herbert (Hub) Stern, said State Rep. Daniel M. Pierce, D-Highland Park, chairman of the 12th district committee.

But the committee stopped short of endorsing Klepak Wednesday night and will have a second meeting, tentatively set for Nov. 21, to interview other prospective candidates, Pierce said.

ALTHOUGH NAMES of several other possible candidates were "tossed out" at the meeting, there are no indications now that anyone else is interested in campaigning against Crane, Pierce said.

"There was a lot of enthusiasm on the committee for opposing Crane and Mr. Klepak himself was quite enthusiastic," Pierce said.

Klepak reportedly told the committee he would be able to raise $50,000 to $85,000 for his race against Crane.

"Mr. Klepak appeared very knowledgeable about the issues. He demonstrated that. He was eloquent and generally made a good appearance," said Walter Soroka, Palatine Township Democratic committeeman.

"We may have some last minute individual come forward. But if not, it looks like Mr. Klepak will be our candidate," he said.

BUT STERN, who has been mentioned as a possible candidate in the past, said there still might be another prospective candidate.

"Let me put it this way. I've been at this game long enough to know that usually there's somebody else who shows up," Stern said.

Pierce said the committee will make an endorsement at its November meeting. Nominating petitions for the March 21 primary election must be filled between Dec. 12-19.

Klepak could not be reached for comment Thursday.

Court hears Hoffman board tape

A tape recording made during a Hoffman Estates Village Board meeting July 23, 1977, was played Thursday for the second day by defense attorneys for 17 former public works employes who were fired four years ago after staging a one-day strike.

The recording, played before Judge Joseph M. Wosik of the Cook County Circuit Court in the Richard J. Daley Center, captured the voices of the angry former employes and concerned citizens who came to the meeting to express their opinions on the firings and ask questions about the action.

"I will have order in this meeting," was the phrase used many times by Hoffman Estaes Village Pres. Virginia Hayter in the 35-minute exchange between herself, a union representative and several of the fired men.

James Chaikulis, a representative of Local 2041, American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employes, AFL-CIO, charged that the village board actually was trying to keep the union out of the village and was using the dispute over a collective bargaining agreement as the way to do it.

Mrs. Hayter told one woman in the audience that "I'm not asking for a pat on the back. I did the job." She said she would not tolerate strikes by public employes under any circumstances.

The 17 former employes sued the village four years ago for reinstatement and full back pay to the date of the firings.

The case is expected to continue today before Judge Wosik.

Correction

A picture caption in Thursday's Daily Herald incorrectly said 400 persons attended two concerts Wednesday night in Woodfield by Harry James and His Swinging Band. More than 4,000 persons attended the concerts.

Missing candy heiress remains baffling mystery credit card or write a check for the air fare; she didn't telephone her friends in Ft. Lauderdale to tell them she was coming.

Investigators also have learned that Matlick was a busy man after Mrs. Brach left Minnesota and before she supposedly left for Florida.

He called a Chicago department store and ordered immediate delivery of a nine-pound meat grinder; he ordered a complete cleanup and repainting job inside Mrs. Brach's Glenview mansion; after he said he left Mrs. Brach at the airport, he had her Cadillac shampooed; he went to her safety deposit box and opened it for the first time; he cashed 11 forged checks, seven of them to himself totaling about $15,000 (handwriting analysis showed Matlick did not forge the checks, however); and he turned away all calls to Mrs. Brach.

WHEN ASKED this week about Mrs. Brach's disappearance, Matlick said, "you have to get that information from the district attorney," and hung up the phone.

Matlick has lived rent-free on the Schaumburg farm for the past several years. He had served as a chauffeur and handyman for the Brach family for more than 10 years before Frank Brach, former chairman of the board of the candy company, died in 1970 and left a fortune, estimated at between $50 million and $100 million, to Helen Brach, his third wife.

She retained Matlick as a handyman and to look after the estate when she was gone.

But she has been gone for nearly eight months now, and though there is no evidence of foul play, no one is optimistic she will ever return.

"There's a strong possibility she's no longer alive," said Glenview Police Chief William Bartlett. "She's not the kind of person who would stay away that long without talking to anybody."

HER BROTHER, Charles Voorhees of Hopedale, Ohio, said he also thinks Mrs. Brach is no longer alive.

"I don't see how she could be," he said.

But Voorhees said he hoped the search will continue until some evidence turns up.

Even if Mrs. Brach is still alive, she probably would be reluctant to return because of the publicity it would involve, Rizzo said.

"We're not talking about a lady who liked publicity," he said.

Chances are that Mrs. Brach will not be found before 1984, when she will be declared legally dead and her fortune divided, Rizzo said.

During the next seven years she will remain a missing person in police and state's attorneys files.

And also during that seven years, Rizzo said, Jack Matlick probably will continue to do what he has always done for Mrs. Brach — watch over the estate while she is away.

Dunne favors country-wide tax incentives

Cook County Board Pres. George W. Dunne said Thursday he supports suburban calls for county-wide tax assessment breaks for new business and industry in Cook County.

Dunne said he expects the county board to pass tax incentives within a month.

County Assessor Tom Tully last July proposed that assessments on new business and industry be reduced from 40 per cent of market value to 16 per cent for five years, but only in economically depressed sections of the county designated by the assessor.

Suburban members of the county board have insisted that any tax incentives should apply countywide.

"That is my thinking as well," Dunne said Thursday.

ON WEDNESDAY Chicago Mayor Michael Bilandic presented a tax incentive plan for the city that includes lower assessments and 60 per cent city property tax rebate for 13 years to new businesses locating in blighted areas.

Bilandic also presented a resolution calling on the county board to enact tax incentives "with all due speed."

Tully's tax incentive plan has been languishing in the county board's finance committee. Earlier this month, Tully renewed his call for assessment cuts. But he opposed county-wide incentives.

Senate decides to continue fight on abortion bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate again turned down a strict limitation on the use of federal funds for abortions Thursday and voted to continue the fight for a "reasonable and humane compromise" in negotiations with the house.

The Senate rejected a resolution 59-33 which would have told its negotiators to accept the House-passed language on abortions and end the impasse which has blocked since July a $60 billion appropriations bill for the Departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare.

Numerous attempts by Senate-House negotiators have failed to produce an agreement on the sensitive abortion issue and a series of votes in the two chambers has failed to sway either side.

THE HOUSE language allows the federal government to pay for abortions for needy women under Medicaid if the woman's life would be endangered if the pregnancy continued and for "medical procedures" for prompt treatment of victims of "forced" rape or incest, provided the victim reports the assault to the police.

The Senate language would allow the use of federal funds for abortions if the women's life is endangered — identical to the House provision — but would add that in the case of rape or incest, the abortion could be performed if "the mother or fetus would suffer serious health damage."

The vote was taken at the request of the two top House negotiators, Rep. Daniel Flood, D-Pa., and Robert Michel, R-Ill., who said they felt the Senate was ready to switch.

Sen. Richard Ochweiker, R-Pa., who introduced the resolution, said recent votes "clearly indicate" the House will not accept "the weaker abortion" language. The House rejected the Senate version 234-163 Oct. 14.

OCHWEIKER SAID he was offering the resolution "to reach agreement and break the impasse," and added "the House language is the best we can get."

But Sen. Edward Brooke, R-Mass., asked for an overwhelming vote against the resolution to send a "clear signal" to the House that Congress has to adopt a "reasonable and humane compromise."

"The House has not given an inch," Brooke said. "The House language is not a compromise in any sense of the word."

Congress adopted a resolution almost two weeks ago continuing funding for HEW and Labor at present levels so employes could be paid and programs could go on.

But that resolution expires Tuesday when the threat of payless paydays would recur unless the Senate and House can reach agreement.

Teen sentenced to probation

A 17-year-old Chicago resident was sentenced to two years probation after he was found guilty of stealing an estimated $60 from a cash register at the Gingiss Formal Wear shop in the Mount Prospect Plaza, Central and Rand roads, Mount Prospect.

Charles Redmond and a 15-year-old juvenile accomplice, both students at the Maryville Academy in Des Plaines, were charged with robbery after taking the money from an 18-year-old clerk, after threatening her Friday at 9 p.m.

Both suspects were captured by police as they attempted to escape on foot in a nearby subdivision. The robbery charge against Remond was dropped Wednesday in favor of the theft charge.

Associate Circuit Judge Erwin Martay sentenced Redmond to two years probation and gave him credit for five days spent in the Cook County Jail, Chicago. Legal action involving the juvenile is pending.

School districts join to fight woes

by HOLLY HANSON

Seven local school districts are joining together in a federally-funded project to find solutions to common but critical educational problems.

Issues to be studied include programs for exceptional children, sex education, the problem of transience and economically deprived students and what to do when a school is closed.

The program is sponsored by the Quincy, Ill. Renewal Network, a statewide educational group, and supervised locally by the Northwest Educational Cooperative, to which the seven participating districts belong.

"EACH LOCAL school district identifies a problem they sense is critical" at one school, NEC Director Larry Chase said. "They assess the needs, identify the resources and get together to solve the problem."

NEC's 10 members are able to make use of career education programs, teacher training sessions, a film library and other resources.

Together, the districts receive a total of $18,900 in federal funds, which will pay for professional consultants, substitute teachers and release time for faculty members involved in the project, he said.

Work begins Thursday with an orientation meeting, Chase said, with solutions expected by August 1978, in time for the 1978-79 school year.

Each participating district not only finds a solution to its particular problem but reaps the benefits of the work done by other districts as well, Chase said.

The districts will discuss the following issues:

• Dist. 15. Improving instruction at the junior high level will be studied at Winston Park Junior High School, 900 E. Palatine Rd., Palatine, said Marion Omiatek, assistant superintendent for instruction.

• Dist. 21. Alcott School, 530 Bernard Dr., Buffalo Grove, will develop individualized programs for gifted children, said Marjorie Beau, assistant superintendent for instruction.

• Dist. 23 Family living and sex education programs will be investigated at MacArthur Junior High School, 700 N. Schoenbeck Rd., Prospect Heights, Assistant Supt. Gerald McGovern said.

• Dist. 25. Consolidating students and staff into a new school after their building is closed will be the topic studied at Miner Junior High School, 1101 E. Miner St., Arlington Heights, Supt. Donald Strong said.

• Dist. 26. Teachers at River Trails Junior High School, 1000 Wolf Rd., Mount Prospect, will discuss the organization and scheduling of junior high programs, Curriculum Director Alan Levin said.

• Dist. 54. Teaching students who have cultural, economic and educational handicaps will be studied by the faculty at Twinbrook School, 400 Ash Rd., Hoffman Estates, said Eleanor Thorsen, assistant superintendent for instruction.

• Dist. 57. At Westbrook School, 103 S. Busse Rd., Mount Prospect, teachers will discuss how to integrate exceptional children from both ends of the scale into the regular classroom, Assistant Supt. Dwight Hall said.

24-hour meat sales in groceries

Starting today, shoppers in the Northwest suburbs and the rest of the Chicago area will be able to buy meat 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

Butchers Thursday approved a contract that eliminates the ban on meat sales after 6 p.m., a ban they have supported for 25 years.

In exchange, the butchers will receive wage increases estimated to total $110 a week over the next three years.

Previous contracts with major area supermarkets stipulated that no meat could be sold in any store after 6 p.m. unless a butcher was on duty and paid overtime. The butchers defended the ban despite growing pressure from community officials and the Illinois General Assembly to end it.

IN A CLOSE VOTE in April, members of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen's Union agreed to end the ban and allow meat sales until 9 p.m., provided a journeyman butcher was on duty.

The contract approved Thursday was signed with five major food store chains: Jewel, A&P, Dominick's, Eagle Discount and Kohl's.

The butchers voluntarily lifted the ban before the legislature threatened to remove it by force. A Senate bill would have required that no labor contract restrict the sale of necessities when the store was open for business.

The new contract calls for an $80 a week pay increase over the next three years in addition to unlimited cost-of-living raises expected to add another $30 a week in wage increases. Butchers currently earn about $335 a week.

The world's imperfections haven't changed in years

Jim Bishop

It is almost a decade since that trip around the world. Nothing has altered my melancholy opinions. The United States hasn't got a friend anywhere. Not one.

Japan is a busted beehive. Factory workers are well-trained insects. Yokohama can turn out bigger tankers, smaller radios, steel rods and automobiles and send them 7,000 miles across the Pacific and undersell American products.

The people have a corner on good manners, hissing and bowing, but they don't have to be taxed for a big defense budget because the U.S. is their big benevolent protector.

IN VIETNAM I listened to skinny Orientals tell me that they really didn't care who won the war because there would always be a master. Saigonese squatting on sidewalks had U.S. shaving cream, razor blades and all the items the G.I. couldn't find in an American post exchange.

Some shyly hoped the war would go on forever because $30 billion a year was being unloaded from U.S. ships at the docks. When they heard that Nixon wanted "peace with honor" they burst into tears.

Hong Kong may be the only honest territory in the world. It's a thieves' market. There you can buy a suit, a dress, pearls, brocaded shoes, a girl, heroin, smuggled gems, a boy, or a tour of the bamboo curtain. Conversely, it is where communist China buys whatever it wants from the Western world.

Some see these places as quaint. They are depressing only if you use your eyes and ears. India starves in dirty rags. Every year it gives birth to the population of Australia. American sent a million tons of wheat and it rotted in open railroad gondolas on the docks at Bombay because Hindus couldn't decide who owned it.

WESTERN CULTURE ruined Lebanon. It was a peaceable Moslem country until the French colonized it and converted almost half of the population to Christianity. The Lebanese kill each other in the name of separate gods. In all nations, they have three fords for Americans: "Send more money."

Israel wants loans, credits, grants, sophisticated weaponry, but no advice. Three million people dictate terms to 40 million Arabs. The Israeli government does not acknowledge that it is losing world sympathy; the U.S. is on the verge of calling in a lot of IOUs.

Egypt, like so many nations, has a two-class society: the few who have, the many who have not. It's a dream state living on slogans. If it has military power, I failed to find it anywhere. Sadat puffs his pipe and talks peace because he hasn't any options.

Greece is a great place to live if your name is Niarchos. It is one of America's "great allies," but it hasn't got the power to reclaim Cyprus from the belligerent Turks. Now and then, like Thailand, it threatens to toss American soldiers and their huge payroll out. Then they have second thoughts.

ITALY IS CREEPING communism. Parts of it are so beautiful that it maketh the eyeballs drunk. Deep inside, communism fights catholicity to the death. Rome is an entrancing city of orgies and absolution.

Western Germany is factory smoke and s subtle admiration of Adolf Hitler. The defeated are rich enough to lend money to Great Britain — a victor. In East Berlin, German war veterans without legs are pushed around in baby carriages. Germany will not forgive itself for losing two wars.

Eisenhower's armies saved France, but the French despise Americans and their money. They look upon us as rich, rude ruffians. I have a few friends in the wine country, but I will not apologize because they know that the French government has a contempt for those who liberated the nation.

ENGLAND, TO MY way of thinking, is heart-break alley. Once, it was the power broker of the world. Today it teeters with dignity and a furled umbrella on the edge of bankruptcy. The socialist government endorsed unions and free medicine. Many of the mills of Manchester are silent. The people spend their evenings in pubs laughing at their plight on the telly. That's what they can still afford — a good laugh.

It felt good to return to the good old U.S.A. Here, at least, almost everyone was busy making money; the children were happy that they could neither read nor write; the quiz shows were rigged; Jack Paar was crying in public; Martin Luther King was organizing more marches on Washington; and influential crooks were getting suspended sentences . . .

Study insanity defense

Society faces profound moral and practical questions involving the problem of how to handle persons who commit violent crimes while they are insane.

On the one hand, the fundamental question is whether it is moral to convict a person of a crime if he is so mentally disordered that he could not control his behavior.

However an equally important question is what to do with the criminally insane person if "punishment" is not appropriate.

Just last week, an Indianapolis jury found Anthony Kiritsis innocent by reason of insanity. Kiritsis held a man captive with a shotgun wired to his head. His crime was seen by thousands of persons on television. Both defense and prosecuting attorneys in the case agree the jury's verdict probably means he will go free.

Also last week, David Berkowitz, accused of the last of the six "Son of Sam" murders in New York, was found competent to stand trial and his lawyer said the defense would be "innocent by reason of insanity." Berkowitz says "howling demons" drove him to kill.

Mental illness has played a role in three Northwest suburban murder cases within the past year. Nancy Barker, who allegedly murdered her father in their Arlington Heights home, and James Barker (no relation), who allegedly shot Otto Meisenheimer in Just Games in Mount Prospect have both undergone extensive psychiatric tests to determine if they are fit to stand trial.

Larry Stotts, who is accused of murdering Alvi Nargas in a Mount Prospect grocery store, has been found competent to stand trial and is expected to enter an insanity plea when his trial starts Nov. 20.

The present court rule is that a person cannot be held criminally responsible for acts that are the product of mental illness.

Determining mental illness has been the job of legal and medical experts. And, in too many cases, the person judged "insane" has been sent to a mental hospital only to be released as "cured" after a short time by doctors who need not take into account the nature of the crime that was committed.

It may be time to reevaluate the concept that persons cannot be held responsible for their actions, no matter how heinous, because of mental disorders.

In addition, the doctors who are responsible for treating mentally incompetent criminals ought to be relieved of the responsibility of determining when to set the person free. That issue should be decided by the courts.

One solution would be to replace the "innocent by reason of insanity" verdict with one in which a person could be judged "guilty and insane." That would allow the person to be properly treated but would leave the question of punishment to be decided by the courts later on the basis of all considerations, including the nature of the crime and the treatment already administered.

Such a reform would have to be combined with better treatment for the criminally insane and with standards, developed cooperatively by the medical and legal communities, to determine when a "cure" is sufficient to allow a person to be released.

What is important is for the law to protect innocent citizens from those who are dangerous while recognizing the humane necessity to treat, rather than punish, the insane.

It is not easy to reconcile the two goals, but they must be reconciled if civilized society is to be protected.

Half street neglected

Residents on Chestnut Street on the south side of Des Plaines have hoped for years that the city would widen their street to two full lanes.

Chestnut is actually only a "half street" because property across from the homes along the street was never subdivided. Thus land for the other half of Chestnut was never dedicated to the city.

Today there is no longer a reason to hope that the second half of the street will ever be built. And the blame lies squarely on the city's shoulders.

The residents' neighbor across the street — a company called Business Interiors, has decided to expand its operation toward the half-completed Chestnut Street. Now a parking lot will be built where residents believe their widened street should be.

Business Interiors is not to blame for the situation. They own the land and want to make the best use of it for their needs.

However, the city should have required donation of the second half of Chestnut Street before giving permission to expand the Business Interiors building.

Des Plaines officials were not looking out for the interests of the residents when they neglected to to that.

Carter team pledges reform

Martha Angle and Robert Walters
In Washington

After President Lyndon B. Johnson proclaimed the "war on poverty" in the mid-1960s, the early recruits at the Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO) had visions of orchestrating a truly major social revolution from a government building.

Those dreams didn't last long. As soon as it became apparent that the poor were beginning to organize on their own behalf, mayors and other local politicians in communities throughout the country realized that their own political careers were in jeopardy.

They pressured Johnson for relief, and he obliged by throttling many of OEO's most daring initiatives. When Richard M. Nixon entered the White House a few years later, he launched an unabashed effort to totally destroy the anti-poverty program.

THOSE HIGH-LEVEL pressures took their toll on the "war on poverty," but the failure of the program to even approach its original goals is attributable in far greater measure to circumstances over which the White House had little control.

The effort to wipe out poverty floundered after it lost public support — and that occurred as a result of a disconcerting series of disclosures about corruption, avarice, venality and outright theft among the recipients and local administrators of the millions of dollars in federal funds being doled out annually.

OEO now is long gone, but the anti-poverty program still is very much alive. Its current incarnation is a "low profile" federal agency called the Community Services Administration (CSA).

According to CSA officials who testified earlier this year at a little-noticed congressional hearing, graft and corruption also are still very much alive within the program.

IN ONE CASE CITED in that testimony, a CSA investigator from Washington was en route to question the director of an unidentified local community action agency about reports of missing funds.

The suspect enlisted the aid of a CSA regional director, who dissuaded his superiors in Washington from taking hasty action. CSA later discovered that the suspect "had embezzled $10,000 and subsequently became a fugitive," explained one agency representative. "I don't know whether he has ever been apprehended."

In another instance, a community action agency located in an unidentified city paid $36,000 annually to retain the services of a Washington law firm. Its officials may have been involved in conflicts of interest and it purchased goods and services at "excessively high" costs, according to the testimony.

The executive director of the local anti-poverty agency in Monmouth, N.J., spent $19,000 on personal travel in 1974. He usually traveled first class and "often times with a companion," CSA officials testified.

FEDERAL ANTI-POVERTY funds also were used to pay for that same person's life insurance premiums, color television and stereo sets, repairs to his home and tickets to football games.

The individual remains executive director of the community action agency because CSA has been unable to take any action against him, according to the congressional testimony.

The middle-class and wealthy people whose tax money is at stake are quick to become outraged about such situations — and rightfully so. The poor invariably are less indignant, but in the long run it is they who suffer the most serious harm, because of program cutbacks.

"The people who are abusing, mismanaging and stealing are the worst enemies of this program," says Frank Jones, CSA's new general counsel and the man in charge of correcting those abuses.

Jones is part of a new CSA management team, appointed earlier this year by President Carter, that is committed to a thorough house-cleaning. If the "war on poverty" is to be allowed to continue, they have no choice but to fulfill that pledge.

'Park board vote insults voters'

The Arlington Heights Park Board has insulted the citizens of this community. To vote for a clubhouse, which is over $300,000 beyond the $1.5 million referendum when citizens insisted that the board stay within its budget is arrogant disregard for the taxpayers' wishes. Although not all the citizens were actively protesting, according to Kathryn Graham "not a single citizen has come to me and said they're in favor of this," nor did the other commissioners indicate citizen support.

If the commissioners were concerned about the wishes of those they represent, they could have asked for a survey via the newspaper and homeowners groups, many of which had representatives at the last two board meetings. I suggest that they request such a survey before they continue to procure a bank loan. If the survey indicates that the voters want the elaborate clubhouse, then the park board will have the assurance that they are indeed acting for the voters instead of in spite of them.

If, however, the people do not want the board to exceed its budget, then the board must agree with Commissioner Graham: "I don't think we have a choice," for elected officials are supposed to represent the people, not themselves.

'Inspectors cause liverless chicken'

Livestock and poultry are inspected by federal inspectors before a supermarket receives them and by state inspectors in individual butcher shops, where meat is processed or slaughtered on the premises. When a part of the chicken's or any animal's internal organs are suspected of disease, or diseased, they condemn and destroy the part(s).

The glands are checked for disease separately from the chicken itself, which may have no disease. Therefore, the store may receive more chickens than insides to go with them.

Power-obsessed author giving success an undesirable reputation

by MELVIN MADDOCKS

Michaek Korda will be remembered as the gentle, friendly looking book editor who wrote a best-seller called "Power! How to Get It, How to Use It" — a handbook so ruthless in its advice that it would have caused Caesar to throw a toga over his blushing head and made Napoleon cry: "Non! Non! Too much!"

Korda has now struck again in pretty much the same place with a sequel titled "Success! How Every Man and Woman Can Achieve It."

Presumably this leaves failure squarely up to the children. Too bad for them. But how would the rest of us know what success is if somebody didn't flop to provide the contrast?

CLEARLY ANYTHING good enough for the jovial winner on the dust jacket must be good enough for everybody else (except, of course, children). But if, in this matter of success-grabbing, you're one of those people with, well scruples, Korda sets you straight at the start:

"It's OK to be ambitious."

"It's OK to look our for Number One."

"It's OK to be rich."

"IT'S EVEN "OK TO be greedy . . . to be Machiavellian (if you can get away with it) . . . to recognize that honesty is not always the best policy (provided you don't go around saying so)."

Korda confronts your moral squeamishness with crude but vivid scenes of Success riding down the street in the back seat of a chauffeur-driven limousine while Other People wait at bus stops in the rain.

Now are you ready to lock up your scruples in the bottom drawer of our teakwood executive desk?

Nobody can say Korda doesn't get right down to business. "If you can undermine your boss and replace him," he writes in the first chapter, "fine, do so."

IF NOT, KORDA HAS a few fiendish tricks for accomplishing the same results over the long run. For example: Come in frightfully early in the morning, he suggests, and "leave memos on your colleagues' desks to greet them when they get in."

An awful lot of Kord's philosophy boils down to this: You are a success if only you can appear to be. Thus he is not so cruel as to ask us to work hard, but does recommend "The Energy Look" because "if we appear listless, slow-moving and lethargic, all the hard work in the world will not convince people that we're worth promoting."

Then there's the uniform. "Most successful people either wear white shirts or blue shirts" and invariably carry leather briefcases. QED, we should.

If you're a woman develop "A kind of steady, self-confident glitter to your eyes" that says: "This kid is going to make it." If this "steely, uncompromising gaze" fails, your "second-strike weapon" is tears ("generally much underrated by feminists," according to Korda). Also, hire a male secretary, avoid squat chairs, cultivate a "low, strong, firm voice" and if you're married, "talk of your husband with the deepest respect and affection, whatever your real feelings are."

WHAT DOES Korda have to add to the old How-to-Make-It manuals? All of the worst cliches are present and accounted for, like "Never say no to opportunity!" The same inspirational stories are told. John D. Rockefeller has been replaced by Ray Kroc, the founder of McDonald's. But it must be reported, listening to a successful man account for his success ("There's a science to making hamburgers . . .") retains its firm position at the top of life's most boring experiences.

The difference is that the old success books were in earnest. Korda's is a staged revival. He camps it.

In 1977 his vision of success is about as appropriate as the gas-guzzling limousine that is supposed to symbolize it. So our author is playing at being the author of a success book just as he advises his readers to play at being a success — an act that becomes a little sad as well as a little silly.

A reader can only hope that Korda's next book will be titled "Weakness!" or "Failure!". As it is, he's in danger of giving success a bad name.

Defeat of canal treaty could have grave results

by BOYD LEWIS

The Panama Canal could be the "last ditch" of the Republican Party and a tragic trap for the United States.

Conservative leaders who have taken the lead to deny Senate ratification of the proposed treaty with Panama have shouldered responsibility for the consequences if the treaty goes down to defeat.

What are those consequences? They are so terrible that some observers shudder to think that rational leaders would consider risking them.

THE PRINCIPAL RISK would be another no-win war for a nation not yet healed from the one in Asia. Turn down the canal treaty with Panama and we have no alternative but to hang on by military force.

Only a military maniac would argue that we could defend the 20-mile wide Canal Zone, which snakes across the isthmus. It would be naked to attack by every weapon from internal sabotage and small arms fire to artillery and rockets.

Obviously our troops could not dig in among the canal installations and civilian dwellings, schools and hospitals. Military necessity would demand that they widen the area of defense by invading Panama itself on both sides of the Zone.

The canal, with its delicate system of locks, would of course be closed by the first shot. Any ship in its waters would be a sitting duck.

CAN ANYONE IMAGINE that such an invasion would be tolerated by the other nations of Latin America? Our slim support in the United Nations would dissolve. Our national conscience would be outraged and another great anti-war movement would split the country.

With the canal closed and contested, civilian employes would have to be evacuated. We would really "lose" the canal, not just operational responsibility and control over many years and with many safeguards to the rightful owners of the real estate through which it was dug.

Those who cry out to repudicate the treaty, negotiated across four administrations, cite "pride." They say that retention of the canal has somehow become entangled with America's patriotism. Of course we are, individually and as a nation, proud of the way we built the canal after the French failed and how we have run it efficiently for ships of all nations ever since.

TRUE, WE ARE a bit rueful about the manner by which Teddy Roosevelt grabbed the land. He set up a puppet Panama Republic when Colombia, which originally owned the territory, refused to deal. In the words of that master semanticist, Senator S. I. Hayakawa of California, "We stole it fair and square."

But pride must not blind national leaders to the consequences of a failure to ratify the treaty, consequences that those who respond to the polls are not qualified to measure.

"What it it that Pride goeth before . . .?"

In the words of the Old Testament (Proverbs 16:18):

"Pride goeth before destruction, and a haughty spirit before a fall."

CADET SHARON FLANIGAN, right, of Toledo, Ohio, gets help from cadet Al Mrozek of Baltimore in recent West Point maneuvers. The Army's top commander, Gen. Bernard Rogers, says draft machinery may have to be reactivated, and ways of moving women into combat should be considered.

Women may go to combat: general

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Army is considering ways of moving women into combat divisions including such fighting units as artillery battalions, according to its chief of staff, Gen. Bernard Rogers.

Rogers also said the nation may have to decide in two years whether it must restore the draft — possibly including the drafting of women — in order to fill depledted military reserve ranks.

He said no decisions have yet been made on exactly which combat-related jobs might be opened up to females, but added, "There are assignments a woman can fill and still not be engaged in hand-to-hand combat or in a frontline positon, although she might end up fighting to protect herself if the enemy overruns."

HE SAID THE Army, under a directive from Congress, was looking at various ways of rewording its regulations, which now prohibit assigning woman to combat divisions or to posts forward of the rearmost battle area.

One proposal still would bar females from such units as tank or infantry battalions but allow them into jobs in artillery or antiaircraft units.

"A young lady, in my opinion, could do a great job in the fire direction center of an artillery battalion," Rogers said, although he would not put women in posts that require carrying "ammunition for four or five hours at a stretch — there are a lot of men who can't do that either."

The Army has about 50,000 women out of a total strength of about 780,000. It plans to increase the number to 80,000 over the next few years.

"I'M NOT SURE we'd want to draft women yet," Rogers said, "but if we're going to continue to utilize women the way we are now, if we ever did go back to the draft we would have to give serious consideration to whether they ought not to be drafted as well."

He said that with draft machinery in "deep standby" status, it would now take about 110 days to get the first conscripted soldier into basic training in a national emergency.

He said this needs to be reduced to 30 days and the Selective Service System should now start "registering, classifying, physically examining and keeping track of" young men to meet this goal.

He said the Army is trying to find ways to recruit volunteers to fill holes in its reserve system, but a draft will have to be considered if none of the solutions work.

MSL titles decided but gridders are still hungry

by VIC NOVAK

This weekend is the calm after the storm in Mid-Suburban League football.

The storm raged last weekend.

Elk Grove defeated Prospect 21-7, to clinch the South Division title and Barrington edged Fremd 13-7 to capture the North Division championship.

The calm returns with four area games tonight and five Saturday.

TONIGHT'S MATCHUPS are Rolling Meadows at Forest View, Hoffman Estates at Elk Grove, Prospect at Conant in the MSL South and Arlington at Fremd in the MSL North.

Saturday afternoon, Hersey visits Palatine and Wheeling goes to Buffalo Grove in North Division games. Non conference contests are Barrington at Schaumburg and St. Viator at Niles West.

In a Central Suburban League South Division matchup, Maine South hosts Maine West.

Elk Grove coach Don Schnake is worried about a possible letdown by his Grenadiers (5-0 and 6-1) against the Hoffman Estates Hawks (0-4 and 0-6).

"It's difficult, because I don't know what state of mind we'll be in," Schnake said. "I've got a pretty good idea of the state of mind they'll be in. You know when you're not really with it, things begin to happen."

COACH BILL GOURLEY'S young Hoffman team (only four seniors) will try to stop a punishing Elk Grove ground attack led by Jack Walsh (5.3 yards per carry) and Jim Meyer (4.4).

Prospect (4-1, 6-1) and Fremd (3-1, 6-1) need wins to keep their hopes alive for possible "at large" entries in the state football playoffs. Besides Fremd and Prospect, nine other Class 5A teams have only one loss. Only three can qualify as "at large" teams.

High school football

Fans of high-scoring games should attend the Prospect-Conant clash. Both teams feature outstanding quarterbacks, Andy Loos for Prospect and Rocky Pugliese for Conant. Loos is second in the area in passing and Pugliese eighth.

Fremd's Kevin Weaver needs 128 yards to go over the 1,000-yard mark for the season against Arlington (2-2, 2-5).

Chuck Klein's passing, Greg Sabatello's rushing, and Chuck Gilman's receiving lead Arlington. All three rank among the top 10 in area football statistics.

Rolling Meadows (1-3, 3-4) and Forest View (3-2, 4-3) exhibit some fine individual runners. Bob Gill of Rolling Meadows has averaged 5.2 yards per carry while John Miscevich of Forest View has a four-yard average.

THE AREA'S second leading receiver, John Comerford, leads Palatine (2-2,2-5) against Hersey (1-3, 1-6). Hersey's Dino Capasso is the sixth leading area receiver.

Buffalo Grove (0-5, 0-6) has to stop a strong Wheeling (2-2, 5-2) rushing game led by Bob Steinberg (4.7 yards per carry) and Jeff Starke (4.4).

Craig Groot (ninth in area passing) and Bob Volkman (Third in area receiving) key the Buffalo Grove offense.

Barrington (5-0, 7-0) will try to stay sharp against Schaumburg (1-4, 1-6). Tim McGraw, with 352 yards in 66 attempts, has been a lone bright spot for Schaumburg.

St. Viator is one of the nine other Class 5A teams with just one defeat. The Lions (4-1, 6-1) are led by quarterback John Josten. He is first in area total offense, third in passing and 13th in rushing.

Niles West is 2-3 in the CSL South and 2-5 over-all. The Indians will run from their wishbone offense.

An injury-raided Maine West team goes against traditional Maine South. Four Warrior starters are out for the season. Runningback Bob Aslan has broken two ribs and quarterback Ron Rausch, runningback Randy Smith, And Scott Pippen have knee injuries.

Adding to West coach Dan Mortier's troubles, junior runningback Tim Richardson will miss this game with an ankle injury.

BOTH TEAMS HAVE seen better days.. West is 1-3 in league play and 2-5 over-all. South is 2-2 in conference and 4-3 on the season.

"We've got to stop their ground game," Mortier said. "They just cme at you."

Inexperience has hampered both teams this season. West's starting lineup against Glenbrook South last Friday night showed only four players that started last year. South lost 20 starters from last season's co-championship team.

Story reports Aaron choice for Braves' helm

ATLANTA — A published report Thursday in the Atlanta Journal said home run king Hank Aaron is No. 1 on the list to become manager of the Atlanta Braves.

The story quoted a "high level source." Aaaron, who holds the major league record for career home runs, said he would take the job, if asked.

Aaron said Thursday that he hasn't discussed the possibility of taking the job with anyone from the Braves.

The Journal story said that if Aaron turns down the job, it would be offered to Yankees' coach Yogi Berra. Berra also said the Braves haven't approached him.

'I'm always willing to listen," said Berra. But I haven't heard anything yet. I might want to manage again."

Berra took over as manager of the Mets in 1972 and guided them to the 1973 pennant. They lost the World Series to Oakland in seven games. Berra was fired in 1975.

Veteran Braves' pitcher Phil Niekro has also declared that he is interested in the job, which was vacated by Dave Bristol, who was fired Monday after two years on the job.

Wheeling takes soccer title

by KEITH REINHARD

Don't awaken a slumbering dragon.

Forest View might well have heeded this advice in the Mid-Suburban League Soccer Bowl I at Wheeling-Thursday night. They didn't, however, and the Wheeling Wildcats roared back from a 2-0 deficit to capture the first league championship playoff, 5-2.

The Falcons struck quickly at the onset of the second half after taking a 1-0 lead off the field at midgame. The hosts countered with a five-goal blitz in 12 minutes to chalk up their 13th over-all win of the campaign in 15 outings.

"THEY WERE JUST too big . . . too explosive for us tonight," Forest View coach Al Beard said shrugging after watching his young club absorb their fourth loss after nine wins and a tie.

"I thought about putting in about ten fullbacks after we picked up that second goal," he said. "Maybe I should have gone ahead."

Actually Beard was in the process of adjusting his lineup afetr Tim Sroka drove down the right side only 19 seconds into the second half and booted a perfectly aimed 15 yarder just inside the right edge of the net.

But Wheeling didn't wait long to respond. Pete Gestrich and Rainer Engelmann teamed up a little more than three minutes later, Gestrich connecting from 10 yards in front of the goal. Thirty-two seconds later John Byckowski took a feed from Louis Restrepo and drilled home a 20-yarder to tie the game at 2-2.

AFTER ANOTHER three minutes elapsed Mike McQuivey had a shot blocked by Falcon goalie Matt Clark coming out of the cage. The ball rebounded right back to the senior halfback, however, and his second shot was true, putting the Wildcats ahead to stay.

Engelmann, with an assist from Gestrich, and McQuivey, on a pass from Restrepo, plunked in insurance goals before the third period was over.

"I was almost glad to be behind at h a l f t i m e , '' Wheeling coach Pete Fischbach said, "Although I have to admit that I got a little scared when they picked up that second goal so quickly."

Fischbach said, "I know we have some tough games coming up in the playoffs so I think it's important that the kids learn how to cope with the pressure of being behind against a good team. We played well enough in the first half tonight though that I felt it was just a question of time before we got on the board."

THE DRAGON IN Wheeling really wasn't sleeping through the first half. An aggressive Wildcat forward line was totally frustrated by the outstanding play of goalie Clark and his defensive teammate Willi Klein.

Both were called on to make a number of super saves including one that had Clark charging 20 yards out of the net to smother a lone breakaway by McQuivey.

With just 5:08 remaining before intermission Falcon Nick Racz broke the scoreless deadlock putting a 12 yarder into the right corner of the net. It turned out to be one of only six Forest View shots in the first half that Wildcat goalie Ron Walsh couldn't handle.

In other soccer action Thursday, St. Viator nipped Notre Dame 4-3 on a pair of goals by Roland Emanuel and one apiece by John Maher and Tom Seidl. Rolling Meadows ripped Fenton 3-0 on scores by Taras Haliw, Tim Mertins and Gary Cook.

GOAL LINE GRASP. Wheeling goalie Ron Walsh hits the turf to scoop up a shot by Forest View's Swen Meesenburg (6) during second half action at the MSL championship soccer playoffs, while John Baum (45), Ed Kotowski (11) and Dan Reynolds look on. Rives' time in limelight to be brief if Bears win

by BOB GALLAS

Bears middle linebacker Don Rives decided it was a good day Thursday — just after the mailman left.

"I only got one letter today," he said. "But that was delivered here at the camp in Lake Forest. There's probably more at the Chicago office."

Rives' mail has picked up and he has gained quite a bit of attention after his remarks Monday that chastized Soldier Field fans for their constant booing. After starring on all the nightly television sportscasts Monday, Rives was a guest on the television program A.M. Chicago Wednesday. Thursday he was a guest on Wally Phillips' morning show on WGN radio. That's pretty good for a guy who usually receives little notice.

RIVES STANDS behind what he said, but he did want to make one clarification.

"I just want to make sure the fans don't think we're 2-4 because they're not behind us," he said Thursday. "That's our fault.

Perhaps the strongest letter Rives has received thus far came from a fan who identified himself only as "Mexican Ed." Ed reeled off a string of four-letter words then added a postscript: "You guys aren't even any fun to watch when I'm stoned."

"I still believe in what I said," Rives said. "Maybe I could have said it alittle beter, though. There are probably only 10 or 15 per cent of the crowd who do the booing."

RIVES SAID many of the letters he has received have backed him. Many others have not been directed at him, but more at the Bear organization as a whole.

"They question why we did this or why we did that, things I have no control over," he said.

Rives' comment that the Bear fans who constantly boo "make me sick," attracted the most attention and seems to have set off a release of the frustration many Chicago football fans have felt this year. Most fans expected big things from a team that is now 2-4.

"We expected a lot too," Rives said. "If you think the fans are frustrated, think how we feel. We figured to be at least 4-2 now and instead we're 2-4."

RIVES IS FORTUNATE that the Bears are on the road at Green Bay and Houston the next few weeks. He won't have to face the Soldier Field boo-birds until after they've had some time to cool down.

"It will sure help if we win this week and next," he said. "We win those two and all will be forgotten."

Fans can also forget previous Bears' starting lineups for this week's matchup against the Packers.

Bears coach Jack Pardee said Thursday that Brian Baschnagel may

Hulman, Indy track owner, dies

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Tony Hulman, the man who brought the Indianapolis Motor Speedway from near ruins after World War II to the most famous auto racing strip in America, died Thursday night.

Officials said Hulman was dead on arrival at St. Vincent's Hospital.

Hulman, 76, bought the famed Speedway in the fall of 1945 for $250,000 and made the late Wilbur Shaw the president and general manager. During the more than a quarter century that he owned the course, he made it into a multi-million-dollar proposition.

Hulman controlled the Hulman & Co. at Terre Haute and a fortune amassed by his grandfather Herman Hulman, who started the business manufacturing baking supplies.

Each Memorial Day holiday, Hulman's scratchy voice was heard around the world on the Indianapolis Motor Speedway Network as he pronounced the famous words — "Gentlemen, start your engines."

Hulman was forced last May to alter his starting signal by the presence of Janet Guthrie, the first woman ever to qualify for the famous Indianapolis 500. He met the occasion by proclaiming: "Gentlemen — in company with the first lady to start the Indianapolis 500-mile race — start your engines."

Picking All-Americans mind-boggling

Bob Frisk

Sports Editor

Quick, who's the quarterback for St. Laurence, the top-rated high school football team in Illinois?

How about the offensive right tackle for Deerfield, the No. 2 team in Illinois?

Any guesses on the middle linebacker for Glenbard West, another Class 5A power?

For someone who has trouble keeping up with all the players in the Chicago area, I am a little dismayed at the prospect of evaluating youngsters from across the country.

THE INVITATION to join in the selections of a 1977 Prep All-America football team came this week.

At first I was flattered, but then I realized just what they were asking. They've got to be kidding. Nobody is qualified for that.

Am I really supposed to pinpoint the top 25 or 50 high school football players in the United States? Where do you start? How do you start?

The whole thing may be serious for the youngsters or their coaches, or the people behind this promotion, but there isn't a writer anywhere who can do a proper job picking a high school All-America team.

HOW YOU YOU measure offensive linemen? How do you compare running backs? Lots of kids pile up fancy statistics. Figures do not lie but liars can figure.

Do you vote only for quarterbacks who do a lot of passing or for the all-round talent who does everything well?

Do you vote for a youngster just because he starts at Massilon, Ohio or Cincinnati Moeller, recognized high school football powers?

Any reasonably gifted young athlete would aspire to this high accolade, but today the processing of naming an All-America team in every sport, high school or college, has degenerated into sheer burlesque.

AT THE BEGINNING of every season the athletic departments of most colleges and some high schools identify the players they are going to promote. The colleges print up publicity brochures, but the high schools usually aren't that obvious.

The colleges will use any gimmick to promote the top players. Beano Cook, the publicist who used to work at the University of Pittsburgh, recently talked about some of the ways to push your All-America candidates.

Cook says if you're at Notre Dame, you always pose your guy in front of the Golden Dome. If it's Army, you take his picture in front of the portrait of Gen. Douglas MacArthur. At Navy, it's in front of the statue of Tecumseh.

"You pay special care to what number you give them," said Cook. "You never give them 66 or 68. Those two numbers look alike. A 60 is much better and double digits — 33, 44, 55 — are dynamite."

AT THE END of the season, if even one newspaper or radio station or magazine or television station names a player to its All-America team, he is forever confirmed.

The All-America nonsense has been carried to extremes by a firm that publishes a yearly book, with photographs, of 'our high school All-Americans.'

To gain entry the athlete simply sends him his picture and $15. He then appears with some 500 other athletes of All-America fame.

The lid was blown off this scheme by a newspaper which as a gag submitted the name of a cheerleader, who was promptly designed an All-America fullback.

When the paper approached the publishers, they replied. "Who's being hurt?"

TODAY THERE ARE so many different appraisers that a player at almost any big-name school who shows talent will win some kind of recognition.

But in the old days it was a matter of impressing two men — Walter Camp and Casper Whitney. They were the two experts who chose the All-America teams. Camp's selections, in particular, carried the greatest prestige.

If a player did very well in a particular game which was witnessed by either Camp or Whitney, he might be placed on the All-America first team on the basis of one afternoon's inspired play.

Every football writer today is involved in the all-star team business, either directly or indirectly, for the star teams go far below the All-America level.

I don't usually balk at these all-area and All-State teams because the whole thing is fun for the fans and pretty important for the few outstanding players. At least you're limited to an area or a single state.

I do draw the line at a high school All-America team. If it's a chore to properly judge the talents of youngsters from Wheeling or Hanover Park or Barrington, how am I supposed to evaluate somebody from Beaver, Pa., or Orlando, Fla., or New Bedford, Mass.?

A story of running, fun and a '65 Ford

Art Mugalian

Byline report

Harper cross country coach Bob Nolan likes to tell the story of his best "find" of the year, the spotless 1965 Ford he uses as an unofficial team car.

"I saw it in a shopping center parking lot and couldn't believe how smooth the engine sounded," Nolan said. "So I actually ran after the woman and asked if she wanted to sell it — and she did. Really, it was a little old lady who only drove on Sundays."

It was the closest Nolan has ever come to outright recruiting.

IN HIS POSITION as a junior college coach, Nolan has no scholarships to offer, no under-the-table money, no inducements other than a clean 1965 Ford to ride around in.

Somehow, though, he still gets the turnout. This year the junior college crop was rich enough to bring Harper its second N4C cross country title in the last three years. On Saturday, the Hawks will run in the Region IV meet in Champaign with an outside shot at qualifying for nationals.

"I suppose I could do a little more recruiting," Nolan said recently. But if he went looking for runners, Nolan might discourage the walk-ons. And it's the so-called walk-ons who make or break this program.

Of the current top seven, just one Harper harrier was No. 1 man on his high school team. Only one Hawk, Jeff Brydges of Maine West, was what you would call a prep star — and that was as a half-miler.

At Harper all seven have reached maturity and begun to realize their potential, runners like Forest View grads Tim Blechl and Curt Long, Arlington's Mike Fischer and Palatine's Jeff Siemon.

"BY THE TIME you're in college you should be mature enough to push yourself," said Tim Jorgenson, a Harper runner who was first man at Hoffman Estates High School last season. "These guys are dedicated enough to running that they don't have to be pushed. So everything around here is relaxed."

Jorgeson admitted that in high school he frequently needed more than a push. "I never would have done anything if Coach (Jim) Swift hadn't been around," said Jorgenson.

While the blue-chippers and the burnouts go elsewhere, Jorgenson and others like him go to Harper, where the mood is laid-back and the emphasis is on fun.

"Coach Nolan is low key," Jorgenson admitted. "But the workouts are hard."

THE WORKOUTS ARE as hard as the Hawk runners want them to be.

"I believe in working hard and training hard," said Nolan, "but I also believe it should be fun — and this is a great group of kids. I can pretty much leave them on their own. Oh, sometimes if they're not pushing hard in a race or something, I have to get on 'em. Sometimes you have to do that.

"But I've always felt that the important thing you should get from high school and college athletics is the day-to-day discipline," Nolan continued. "The discipline of coming to practice, working hard at it, pushing yourself."

Nolan's responsibilities have been kept to a minimum, largely because of his self-motivating harriers. It gives him more time to work with Harper's first two female cross country runners, Sandy Young and Lynne Oswald.

"The girls are really working hard," said Nolan. "And they're improving. Sandy ran her best race of the year last Saturday at the conference meet."

Young and Oswald compete in special two-mile races wherever the Hawks go. According to Nolan, it's only a matter of time before Harper has its own girls team. For now, though, Young and Oswald train with the others.

"THE GUYS HAVE been super," said Nolan. "They've accepted the girls completely."

Nolan watched his N4C champions in training this week, giving each one the attention a father would give a son or daughter. "This is a satisfying job," the coach said.

But after nearly 20 years of coaching — including a decade at Harper — Nolan says he wants to do something else. He would like to become involved in the school's new fitness lab. There won't be time for coaching.

"A professor once told us that every eight years you should stop what you're doing and get into something else," Nolan said. "That seems like it might be good advice."

THE WORKOUT WAS over and Mitch Riley was standing in front of Nolan with gobs of mud all over his legs and back, the victim of a little friendly horseplay during the day's run. The coach exploded in mock anger.

"There's no way you're getting into my antique car," Nolan said, motioning to the lily-white Ford.

Nolan raised his hands as if to invoke a higher authority. "I have no control over these kids," he said, winking at the irony of his statement.

Touring Kings rip Cavs, Houston clobbers Bucks

NBA report

Rookie guard Otis Birdsong tossed in 18 points — 17 of them in the second half — and Scott Wedman added 17 Thursday night to spark the Kansas City Kings to a 119-104 win over the Cleveland Cavaliers.

It was only the second win in six games for the Kings, who play 13 of their first 16 games on the road.

After spotting the Cavs a 2-0 lead, the Kings missed their first field goal attempt but hit their next 10 shots and raced to a 37-28 first period lead.

THE CAVS, who tied it at 23 midway through the first period, got within three points of the Kings at various points of the game but couldn't get the key basket.

Birdsong, who hit on 6 of 11 from the field, pumped in 13 points in a 30-point fourth period, while Wedman hit 8 of 19 shots with 7 points coming in the third period.

HOUSTON 133, MILWAUKEE 110

IN HOUSTON Rudy Tomjanovich, Moses Malone and Calvin Murphy combined for 89 points to lead the Houston Rockets to a 133-110 win over the Milwaukee Bucks.

Tomjanovich had a game-high 32 points, Malone added 31 and canned 22 rebounds and Murphy had 26 points as Houston broke the game open in the second quarter. With the score 25-25 after the first quarter, the Rockets scored 41 points in the second period to take a 66-56 halftime lead.

Brian Winters scored 22 of his 29 points for the Bucks in the second half to keep Milwaukee within reasonable distance. Winters had 16 points in the third quarter while Tomjanovich had 12 for the Rockets in the period. Dave Meyers added 20 points for Milwaukee, while Ernie Grunfeld and Marques Johnson each had 16.

Guard John Lucas, who had a game-high 18 assists, tied a 19-year-old NBA record when he passed out 12 of them in the third quarter. Bob Cousy of the Boston Celtics set the old mark on Feb. 27, 1959.

Quick goals lead streaking Red Wings to 3-1 victory

NHL report

DETROIT (UPI) — Al Cameron and Andre St. Laurent scored goals in a one-minute, 20-second span of the second period Thursday night to help the Detroit Red Wings win their third straight game, a 3-1 triumph over the Minnesota North Stars.

Cameron was in the penalty box when Ron Zanussi gave Minnesota a 1-0 lead with a power play goal on a deflection at 8:50 of the second period, but the Red Wing defenseman came back to score his first goal of the season at 11:56 on a perfect pass from Rick Bowness.

St. Laurent's first goal in a Red Wing uniform put Detroit in front for good at 13:16 on a power play. Dennis Polonich closed out the Detroit scoring at the :32 mark of the third period with a 40-foot blast past Minnesota goalie Pete LoProsti.

The loss was Minnesota's second to Detroit this week and seventh in eight outings this season.

Seven area singles players and five doubles teams advance to today's quarterfinal round. The action starts at 8 p.m. and will conclude about 3 or 4 p.m. on the Dist. 214 courts. Arlington High School will host the quarterfinal championships starting at 1:30 p.m.

Local quarterfinal hopefuls in singles include defending state champion Sue Jaeger of Stevenson, Lisa Smart of Buffalo Grove, Kate Swaya of Hoffman Estates, Nancy Webber of Maine West, and Sarah Olson of Barrington.

'Unpredictable' describes Spartans game strategy

Loren Tate

The forward pass still is battling to gain accepted status in the Big Ten.

There's Michigan, for example. Bo Schembechler's former national leaders got out of balance at Minnesota, launching an unprecedented 29 aerials and running just 33 times in a 16-0 upset loss to the Gophers.

Watch for Bo to "return to basics" against Iowa (an 18-6 conqueror of Minnesota) this week.

JIM YOUNG'S revolutionary new air approach — heavens, he's even using the shotgun! — has netted Purdue three conference losses and just one triumph.

And at Michigan State, well . . . remember when Darryl Rogers was singing the praises of the overhead game, throwing the ball all over the lot and fancying himself the Midwest's high priest of wide-open football?

Suddenly, aftr turning loose QB Ed Smith for 139 pass attempts in a 2-3 start, Rogers pulled the plug. At Indiana, his Spartans hit just six of 19 passes. Rogers became so conservative on that single afternoon that he called for a 1-point conversion kick — instead of going for two points and a possible win — to tie Indiana 13-13 with two minutes left.

And last Saturday, MSU looked like a typical grind-it-out Big Ten team. The Spartans were outpassed, 216 yards to 63, but won the game, 9-7, at Wisconsin.

Rogers says he hasn't changed. He says he'd still like to gear his offense around a passing game. But injuries, he states, have thinned the offensive unit and sidelined his top receivers. That's why he went for the tie at Indiana, and that's why Smith sagged to 3-for-10 via the airways at Wisconsin.

"WE'VE LOST SIX starters with knee injuries," says the second year Spartan coach from San Jose State. "Over-all, we are minus 11 guys who figured to be starters at the beginning of the fall.

"We're not worried about the Illinois game Saturday. We're just worried about getting through each day of practice. We want to keep throwing the ball, but we have a real problem with our outside receivers. Our recent tendency toward running (fullback Jim Early 100 yards Saturday) just happened. If we get some of our people back, we might put it up 40 times."

East St. Louis junior Eugene Byrd, who speared 31 passes last year, is lost for the season but the return of the conference's 1976 receiving leader, Kirk Gibson, is possible. A superb deep threat, Gibson caught 39 passes for 748 yards last season and had three TD receptions early this season before severely bruising his heel early in the Indiana game.

"We really don't know what to expect this week," said University of Illinois coach Gary Moeller, striving to pull a 3-4 club to .500.

"I'm sure Rogers would like to throw more than he has the last two weeks because his offense is geared to that. But he may have been concerned about reducing turnovers (six lost balls in a 16-6 loss to Notre Dame, and five in 24-14 loss to Michigan), and he found the running game more effective in that respect.

"WE'VE STUDIED Rogers and even at San Jose he would pass one week and go primarily to the run the next."

Moeller learns all he can about the man he opposes. Before Illinois played Stanford, the UI staff studied Cincinnati Bengal and San Diego Charger films to know more about coach Bill Walsh. At Michigan, Moeller studied San Jose film to gain knowledge about his new adversary at MSU.

Moeller discovered that Rogers prefers to pass but also likes to toss in a changeup now and then. The Spartan coach revels in the "wide-open" label — and can point to MSU school records of 257 passes and 1,749 yards for QB Smith last year — but he also will do whatever he believes is necessary to win.

The record shows that MSU has been outgained through the air, 439 yards to 147, the last two weeks but did not lose either game. This bears out an old Woody Hayes theory that passing teams win the statistics, not the games.

If you were Moeller traveling to East Lansing this week, what would you expect? The original Rogers or the new one?

New area grid leaders emerge

by KEITH REINHARD

New area leaders took command in four of five statistical departments this week as the 1977 football season headed down the home stretch.

With the exception of rushing, where Fremd's Kevin Weaver continued to hold off Elgin's Barney Spates, last week's offensive pacesetters have all been overtaken — two of them by St. Viator players.

Viator quarterback John Josten passed and rushed for nearly 200 yards a week ago while leading his team to a 48-12 romp over St. Joseph. The Lion signalcaller now has 940 yards worth of total offense to pace that category and is well on his way to a second straight thousand-plus campaign.

Another Lion meanwhile, Dan Schwellenbach, has taken over the top notch in scoring with 50 points.

In passing, Elgin's Tom Hayes scrambled for an impressive aerial 267 yards last week to easily overtake Prospect's Andy Loos, 682-549. Both quarterbacks have now flipped seven touchdown passes.

On the receiving end, Elgin Larkin's Phil Green hauled in five catches to slip past Palatine's John Comerford, 22-21.

Along with Josten, Weaver has to be rated an excellent bet to crack the thousand yard mark this fall. Weaver has collected 706 of his yards in league play as well to rank 15th already on the MSL single season rushing honor roll.

If the Viking back can churn up 123 yards tonight against Arlington, he will not only hit the grand mark overall, but move up into sixth place as well among the MSL ranks just behind former Forest View great John Kronforst.

Other Mid-Suburban players also edging toward recognition on MSL honor rolls include Comerford and Buffalo Grove's Bob Volkman with 18 and 20 receptions respectively, along with Elk Grove's Jim Meyer and Wheeling's Bob Steinberg who both need less than 100 yards to reach the top 25 in loop rushing.

A trio of new Barrington players are also making a run at the record book. Halfback Steve Edwards has 575 yards rushing, quarterback Bruce Henricksen is just 150 yards shy of becoming the sixth MSL passer to reach 1,000 and receiver Eric Shellenback has 33 receptions for 435 yards to already rank among the top ten all-time circuit pass catchers.

Mel Brewer dies; 'slush fund' figure

CARBONDALE, Ill. — Melvin C. "Mel" Brewer, who blew the whistle in the University of Illinois athletic department "slush fund" scandal a decade ago, died here in Memorial Hospital.

Brewer, 59, director of service enterprises at Southern Illinois University, had been ill with cancer since last January and had reentered the hospital Oct. 17. He came to SIU in March, 1968.

Brewer's disclosure of confidential records to school officials touched off the "slush fund" scandal. The records showed that two funds containing $21,000 were maintained within the department to make illegal payments to athletes. The payments ranged from $15 to $50 a month.

The disclosures resulted in the suspension from competition of 13 athletes for taking payments and two coaches, Pete Elliott in football and Harry Combes in basketball. They were placed on probation for their part in the distribution of the cash.

There were reports at the time the scandal broke that Brewer disclosed the fund because he was upset that he was not appointed athletic director. He later denied the charge and said he felt he "would be remiss in not reporting fully and faithfully" what he had learned.

McLendon leads Pensacola Open

PENSACOLA, Fla. — Veteran Mac McLendon used only 24 putts Thursday to card a 5-under par 66 and take a one-stroke lead in first round of the $125,000 Pensacola Open golf tournament, last official stop on the 1977 PGA tour.

McLendon went out in par 35 but recorded five birdies on the back nine of the tree-lined 6,549-yard Pensacola Country Club course and took a one-shot lead over tour rookie Jim Chancey and Pat Fitzsimons.

Behind the top three the field was tightly bunched with 81 other pros — more than half the 144-man field — at par 71 or better.

Police closing in on horse thief

STANTON, Calif. — Police disclosed Thursday they were following several leads that could provide a break next week in the theft of Town Policy, a world record setting 2-year-old quarterhorse, who was stolen from his stable last week.

"We have leads in the case that we are investigating and we're using every resource available to us," said investigator Larry Temple. "We might have something to report next week, but right now it's an iffy situation."

Town Policy, owned by Ivan Ashman, an Idaho Falls, Idaho, potato farmer, was found missing from his stable Oct. 20 when Mike Chambless, foreman of the Blane Schvanevelodt Racing Stable, came to the ranch to feed the horses.

The gelding set a world record for a 2-year-old quarterhorse when he captured the Fresno Futurity in 19.67 seconds for 400 yards..

Storm's Holt claims MVP award

Chicago Storm catcher Benny Holt was given the Most Valuable Player award Thursday as the premiere member of the American Professional Slo-Pitch League.

The MVP voting for the first-year softball circuit was done by the league coaches, who gave Holt six first place and four second place votes. It provided the slugger 92 points out of a possible 100.

Holt's choice was prompted by such impressive statistics as 89 home runs, 127 RBIs and a .690 batting average in 56 games. Those stats gave Holt the Triple Crown for a team that finished in last place with a 22-34 record.

He won another trophy for being named to the league's all-pro team. Storm second baseman Buldy Haines, who batted .605 with 109 RBIs, was also named to the team.

The trophies were presented by Bill Byrne, the league president. Byrne said that the league's expansion plans are moving along with at least eight new franchises expected for next season, which will open May 12.

Footballs need closer inspection

HOUSTON — Southwest Conference Commissioner Cliff Speegle has indicated all footballs to be used in SWC games the rest of this season will be policed a little more carefully to make sure they conform to the right size, pressure and weight.

Speegle was reacting to charges by Houston kicker Kenny Hatfield that Arkansas kicker Steve Little might have used an unofficial football in last Saturday's Razorbacks-Cougars game. The Cougars lost 34-0.

"We've instructed officials to measure all balls to be used in all games and we've instructed the home team to furnish the template for the measurement," Speegle said. "If it isn't being done, it will be."

get his first start of the season at wide receiver, replacing Bo Rather.

"BO'S BEEN beat up and is hurt a little bit, though he'll play," Pardee said. "He's been taking some pretty good licks the last few games and this week in practice."

Pardee indicated earlier that Mike Hartenstine would again start at defensive end. Hartenstine took over for the injured Jerry Meyers last week. Meyers is recovered, but Hartenstine has apparently won back the job he lost to Meyers prior to the opening of the regular season.

Jim Osborne will start in place of Wally Chambers this week. Chambers played extensively last week but probably won't practice this week due to a sore knee.

Pardee also said Jeff Sevy, moved over from offensive tackle to the defensive line last week, will see more playing duty this week.

"Sevy's come to life in practice this week," Pardee said. "We'll try to work him in more."

Pardee added that running back Johnny Musso, who spelled both Walter Payton and Roland Harper at running back last week, will also see more action this week in an attempt to keep Payton and Harper fresher.

Archery championships becoming household event for Frank family

by DOROTHY O'SULLIVAN

At 16, Michelle Frank holds the state title in high school girls' archery. But for Michelle, winning the title may be just the beginning.

Judging from her record-setting performance at the state tournament, where she left her nearest competitor 21 points behind, the Hersey junior has an excellent shot at an unprecendented second state title next year. College, too, is definitely included in her future plans. "We are hoping for an archery scholarship," says Walter Frank, Michelle's father.

A gleam appears in her eyes at the mention of the Olympics. But her voice, and the voices of the other family members, are hushed and hesitant when speaking of the subject. It is as though they wonder if they even dare to think about reaching for such a lofty goal.

Michelle Frank

THE FRANK family is far from hushed and hesitant when it comes to the sport of archery, however. The entire family is active in the sport, so much so that they spent 10 days of their vacation this summer at The World Archery Center (TWAC), an archery camp in Marshall's Creek, Penn.

Corinne, the eldest of the five Frank children, started it all off. "She joined the archery team (at Hersey) as a sophomore because all her friends from freshman year were on the team," recalled Annette Frank, the girls' mother. The following year, Michelle entered high school and joined the team because her sister was on it. Soon, the whole family became involved.

Corinne, 18, is now a freshman at Indiana State University in the prepharmacy program. Attending on an archery scholarship, she is also pursuing her favorite sport as a member of the ISU archery team.

"On the same day that Michelle was winning her title, Corinne won the Indiana state collegiate tournament," said Mrs. Frank. She will be shooting for national honors in the Collegiate National Tournament, to be held May 11-13 at Kent State University in Kent, Ohio.

Fourteen-year-old Maureen has just completed her first year of competition on the Hersey team and was the only freshman in Illinois to qualify for the state tournament. Her 19th-place finish was an outstanding achievement for a freshman, according to Hersey archery coach Cheryl Wilcox.

MAUREEN IS planning to join the bowling and badminton teams at Hersey this year and, further in the future, she has an eye on college and "maybe nursing."

Mr. and Mrs. Frank, 12-year-old Brian and 6-year-old Andrea do their shooting at home, where they have targets set up in the backyard, and at Lion's Park in Mount Prospect.

The park district archery program there is under the direction of Russ Hoogerhyde, a retired postal worker, who has been shooting since 1920. A member of the archery hall of fame, Hoogerhyde was a six-time amateur national champion during the 1930s.

Brian, who will be entering high school next fall, will not have the same opportunities to compete as the girls have, according to Mrs. Frank.

"There is no high school boys' team at present," she said. "He will have to continue in the park district program for now."

MICHELLE AND Maureen also do much of their practicing at home and at the park. How much practicing does it take to be a state title winner? Michelle said she put in "about four or five hours a day during the summer."

During the season the team practices almost three hours a day, six days a week at school, according to Mrs. Wilcox. But once the season ends and winter sets in, there is very little opportunity for practice. "I spend about two hours a week at the park, then," said Michelle.

Mrs. Wilcox also stressed the importance of working with weights during the off-season. "It's necessary to strengthen the arms and keep the muscles in condition," she said.

In between school work and archery activities, Michelle finds time for occasional part-time jobs such as helpher father, a pharmacist.

"The girls work to earn most of their equipment or receive it as birthday presents. It is not given to them outright," said Mr. Frank. "They also know how to make their own bowstrings and do a lot of their own maintenance. These are some of the things they learned at camp."

Area girl runners favored in meet

by VIC NOVAK

Although it is not the official girls state cross country meet, the 25 teams entered in Saturday's Illinois State Invitational at Northeast Park in Downers Grove will gladly accept the results as being "official."

The Invitational at 3 p.m. is called the unofficial girls state cross country championship because the Illinois High School Assn. does not sanction any such tournament.

Thus, the invitational will have to suffice. And that's just fine with Wheeling coach Jim Nagel and Hoffman Estates coach Bob Lyons, because their two teams are the meet favorites.

Nagel believes his Wildcat girls' team, the Invitational's defending champion and the 1977 Mid-Suburban League titlist, can repeat their win.

"Well, I've got to be honest," said Nagel. "I think our chances are real good.

"WE WILL HAVE to run well," Nagel said. "We can't go in there and expect the other girls to give it to us."

The Wheeling coach thinks three of his athletes (Denise Begrowicz, Debbie Rathje and Betsy Buenzow) can make the top 15 runners. He also said Sharon Vogt is a possibility for that group.

At last Saturday's Mid-Suburban League meet, only Rathje and Begrowicz made the top 10 final finishers.

Hoffman Esttes was one of the reasons more Wheeling runners didn't make the top 10. Hawk girls Tara

Patty Carrell

Leiby, Char Warring and Nancy Greaney occupied the second, ninth, and 10th places respectively.

"I think Tara Leiby and Char Warring are capable of being in the top group," Lyons said. "I think we've got a good chance to come home with one of the top three trophies."

A THIRD POSSIBLE favorite is Woodstock. Lyons said Woodstock features strong over-all balance and runs a very strong pack.

Three teams regarded as dark horses are Arlington, Palatine and Hersey.

Arlington, like Woodstock, features strong depth, but no individual standout. The Cardinals' highest placing runner in the MSL meet was Kathy Donnellan, seventh. If she runs that well again, and teammates Becky Ivan, Debbie Ullenius,Debbie Kelly, Sue Cripe and Brenda Boelkens improve their usual strong performances, the Cardinals could surprise.

Palatine will need more than Joan Kelly's normally fine effort. Kelly placed fourth in the MSL meet.

MARGARET LaPORTE, the 1977 Mid-Suburban League individual champion, leads a fast-improving Hersey team. Hersey was fourth in the league meet and fifth in the final conference standings this season. The Huskies nearly upset Wheeling in each team's final dual meet, 27-28.

LaPorte's competition for the Invitational's first-place spot will come from sophomore Patty Carrell of Watseka, Darlene Swan of Joliet West and Karen Campbell of Downers Grove North, the host school.

Carrell is the defending individual champion and has run a 3-mile course in 6:20. Last spring she won the state 2-mile in a record 10:41.3.

Other meet entrants include York, Rich South, Glenbrook South, Lake Park, Downers Grove South, Evergreen Park, Lane Tech, Lincoln-Way, Naperville South, Naperville North, Oak Park, Rich Central, Rockford Guilford, Waukegan West and St. Joseph of Ogden.

Harper victory would clinch winning season

The Harper football team will try to ensure itself of a winning season when it battles Concordia at 1:30 p.m. Saturday on the Hawk field.

Entering the game with a 4-3 record, a victory would give the Hawks their second straight campaign with a better than .500 percentage. They will close the season next Thursday night at Wright.

One of Harper's biggest problems this year has been the inability to score a touchdown when deep inside the opponent's territory. But in total points, they still have only a slight deficit at 89-88.

The Hawk defense will try to regain the form it showed when shutting out three straight opponents before Joliet came through with a 26-13 victory against Harper last Saturday night.

Ricky Williams is the Hawks' leading rusher for the year with 436 yards in 100 attempts. Bill Strawn is the top receiver with 16 catches for 201 yards.

Schaumburg hosts field hockey play

Schaumburg High School will host a state field hockey sectional tournament starting next week.

On Monday, Barrington engages Elgin Academy. Two days later, Elgin Larkin takes on Schaumburg. The two winners will then play for the championship on Friday. All matches start at 3:30 p.m.

Schaumburg ended its regular season with a 2-1 victory at Deerfield Tuesday. The win was Schaumburg's 11th against only one loss.

Win at bridge

Slam game takes planning

South looked over dummy carefully before playing to the first trick. He wanted to find a way to win 12 tricks. His first decision was that he just wouldn't make the hand if he had to lose a trump trick.

He had nine top tricks. Could he ruff two diamonds and a spade in dummy? It didn't seem likely. How about doing something with the clubs?

Then South let the spade come around to his ace and promptly played out his ace and king of trumps. Should trumps break 3-1 he wanted to win the third lead in dummy. Sure enough they did break 3-1.

He entered dummy with the queen of trumps, led the queen of clubs and discarded a spade after East played low. West took his ace and led another spade. South won with dummy's king and led the jack of clubs.

It didn't matter what East did. South was going to make two spades, two diamonds, two clubs and his own five trumps with one diamond ruff in dummy.

Ask Andy

Retardation may show up very early

Andy sends a World Book Year Book to Heidi Cone, 13, of Staten Island, N.Y., for her question:

HOW EARLY CAN YOU TELL IF A CHILD IS MENTALLY RETARDED?

Doctors think about mental retardation before a child is born. Proper care should be given to a prospective mother both before and during pregnancy. Special precautions should be taken to assure a proper delivery with intensive care of a sick or premature infant being available to offer more protection. Special diets and medication also is important at this time.

Mental retardation is a human condition where subnormal intellectual and social development is present. About 3 per cent of the people in North America suffer some degree of retardation.

It isn't always known at birth whether a baby is mentally retarded. Mild retardation often is not recognized until after a child starts attending school and then fails to learn easily or fit into a pattern of social growth and development.

Some seriously retarded children, on the other hand, are quickly identified since often they are slow to talk, walk or even sit up. Mental retardation also can be detected as a result of a very early display of physical handicaps.

Not too long ago parents were advised to place retarded children in special institutions. Now doctors feel all but the very seriously retarded can benefit by living an almost-normal life with their family. By the 1970s, less than 4 per cent of the mentally retarded children were living in institutions.

Do you have a mentally retarded member of your family? Or do you have a close friend or relative who has a retarded family member? Then you know great patience and understanding is necessary to help in caring for the retarded person.

While a person who is mentally retarded cannot be cured, there is much that can be done to help him in his intellectual and social development. Most can learn to function well within the limits of their abilities.

As a retarded child grows older, his education is usually directed more and more toward perfecting the skills he will need as an adult. Most can become excellent workers and good citizens. In fact, almost every retarded person usually can be directed to fit into a good life and do productive work.

Mental retardation can be the result either of inherited conditions or environmental factors. Among the environmental causes are those events that can happen at the time of birth. Mental retardation can result from things such as brain infection, head injury, prolonged high fever, swallowing concentrated poisonous substances or the interruption of breathing for a time.

Andy sends the 1977 World Book Science Year Annual to John Schroeder, 11, of Sarosota, Fla., for his question:

WHAT IS FREON?

Freon is a trademark held by the DuPont Co. for a group of fluids used in home refrigerators, aerosol sprays and in air conditioners. Freons also can be used as fire-extinguishing agents and solvents.

Carbon, chlorine and fluorine are the items used in each compound of the Freon group. Together they are called fluorocarbons or chlorofluorocarbons. One of the most widely used Freons has the fancy name of difluorodichloromethane.

Some of the Freons are poisonous, but most of them are not. They have little tendency to corrode metals. Some scientists say that all fluorocarbons released into the atmosphere can harm the earth's protective ozone layer, but the subject is still under study.

Send your question on a post card to Ask Andy in care of The Daily Herald, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006, making sure to include your name, age and address. Entries are open to girls and boys 7 to 17.

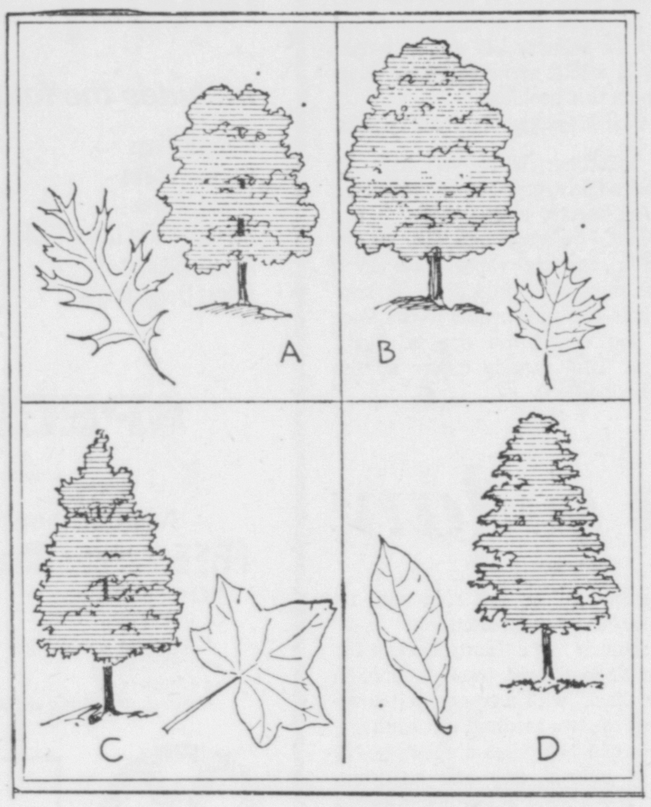
These four trees are remarkable for their brilliant show of color

Shown here are four trees that are remarkable for their brilliant show of color in autumn. They all have other outstanding qualities that make them some of the most desirable trees you can use in your landscape.

The tree in sketch A is the Scarlet Oak, a sturdy and very hardy tree with good form and excellent foliage. Its name, of course, derives from the flaming scarlet of its leaves in autumn. You can readily identify the leaves of this tree by their bristly pointed and subdivided lobes and deeply cut outlines. The leaves are smooth and shiny above and paler in color beneath. The Scarlet Oak, under good conditions, will grow about 15 feet in 10 years.

Colorful, too, and beautiful in many other ways is the Sugar Maple sometimes called the Rock Maple, illustrated in sketch B. In fall the leaves of this stately tree turn yellow, orange and red, making a spectacular display. Though its rate of growth does not approach that of its weak-wooded relative, the Silver Maple, it does grow about two feet a year.

Sweetgum is the name of the tree in sketch C. This is a tree with a slender trunk and short, slender branches that, in some parts of the country, reaches a height of more than 100 feet. Its preferred habitat is low wet woodlands but it will grow very well in much dryer places. Leaves of this tree somewhat resemble those of the maples. Fall color is brilliant and often you will find a variety of colors ranging from green to yellow and scarlet on a single tree. The Sweetgum grows at about the same rate as the Sugar Maple.



Sourgum is only one of the many names for the tree in sketch D. Others are Tupelo, Pepperidge and Black Gum. The name Sourgum relates to its blue-black, oval-shaped, small, sour fruit. Like the sweetgum, this tree prefers low wet soil, borders of swamps, rivers and ponds. And, like the Sweetgum, it also will do well on dry ground. The most outstanding characteristic of this tree is its autumn color. It is usually one of the first trees to show color. Often in late summer you can find a few brilliant blood-red leaves on a Sourgum tree that seem to foretell the coming of fall. When all of the foliage of a Sourgum tree is colored it looks like a pillar of fire. The Sourgum grows at a rate of a foot and a half a year.

Is weed killer effective on dandelions at this time of year?

It has some effect but you will get better results if you wait until next spring when dandelions are in vigorous growth.

What would be the best kind of Forsythia to plant on top of a retaining wall?

Siebold Weeping Forsythia would spill over the face of your wall in a very attractive way.

Fall feeding can help sick lawns

The summer of 1977 wreaked havoc on many lawns. Hot, searing weather early in the season, followed by drought that in turn was succeeded by heavy August rains provided ideal conditions for weed growth and fungus attacks.

"But you can get your lawn back into shape if you take advantage of generally ideal conditions in fall to seed and feed," advised Dick Brickman, president of Theodore Brickman Co., landscape architects and contractors, Long Grove. "The season is also good to get shrubs and trees ready for winter," he said.

The company has designed and maintained the landscaping for many suburban office buildings, shopping centers, hospitals, and other commercial and institutional buildings in the Chicago area. Keeping these installations looking their best is just as important as designing them. Brickman recommends:

IF YOUR LAWN looks weak and thinned out, re-seed it. Go over it first with a mechanical spiking or aerating device to create tiny holes in which the new seed can lodge. This is better than sowing seed on the grass and thatch.

Then apply seed that's compatable with existing turf. For grass that's faded or thinned in shady areas, use fescues or shade-tolerant blue grass varieties, such as Glade or Warren's A-34. Then water the grass daily until it germinates.

Lawns that are havily infested with weeds present a problem. You can't sow new seed and apply weed killers at the same time. So should you weed now and leave the re-seeding until the spring, or re-seed now and leave the weeds?

"We believe you're wiser to seed in the fall," Brickman said. "Most weeds will die out by themselves. If you seed in the fall, the grass will take hold and begin to tiller, which means it sends out sideways growth. This process, along with seeding, thickens up the lawn faster. In the spring you can apply pre-emergence herbicides to take care of some new weed growth."

Your next step is to feed your lawn. Brickman said if you feed only once a year, September-October is the best time to do it. That's because the grass is tillering most in the fall, and feeding enhances the tillering effect. At the same time, there's no danger of promoting fungus growth, as there is in the summer.

WHILE THERE ARE several schools of thought about what kind of turf formula is best for feeding in the fall, Brickman feels you should experiment and see what works best on your grass variety and soil conditions. A formula of equal parts of nitrogen, phosphorus, and potassium is the cheapest and produces balanced growth. Another school favors a high-nitrogen, slow-release formula, which is the most expensive and promotes top growth.

"If you can only feed once, a fall feeding will usually do the trick, except if you have a heavy feeder grass, such as Merion, which should get one feeding early in September and another in October," Brickman said.

Your shrubs and trees need attention during September and October also. Begin a weekly schedule of watering shrubs and evergreens — especially azaleas, rhododendrons, and boxwood — so they'll build up a moisture supply. They need this to carry them through the winter, when they can't draw water from the frozen ground.

Brickman advised using a root feeder to get the water down where the plants can use it. This is especially recommended on new plants or those installed in the last several years. On older plants, a hose or sprinkler is adequate. Keep up the weekly waterings until the ground freezes.

While you're watering your shrubs, keep an eye out for insect pests that may still be around. This year, red spider has been infesting evergreens, while aphids have been doing damage to deciduous shrubs. An application of malathion will control most foliage-feeding sucking insects, Brickman said.

Finally, examine the trees on your grounds with an eye to pruning them or cabling and bracing them before winter sets in. The weight of snow and ice can result in broken branches. Deadwood should be removed, heavy branches should be pruned, and weak crotches should be reinforced with cabling or bracing.

Vapor causes surges in Toyota

Doyle K. Getter

Your auto and you

Auto Column: When I have driven my 1974 Toyota Corona for a while, turn it off and then restart the warm engine, frequently the car will sort of surge and hesitate, faster and slower, all by itself. I have an automatic transmission. Would that be causing it?

Mrs. B.J.J., Peoria, Ill.

Mrs. B.J.J: A vapor will build up in the carburetor of a warm engine, causing the problem on restart you have described Toyota has a "fix" for that, a kit that will bleed off the vapor. It's inexpensive, about $20 installed.

Auto Column: I have under 20,000 miles on my 1974 Dodge Dart. In the morning when the motor is cold and I put it in reverse, there is quite a jolt. My transmission mechanic said it is nothing to worry about, but it disturbs me. When I accelerate it doesn't always change speeds smoothly, particularly from 2nd to high. The shift sort of lags and then engages with a jar or thump.

Mr. E.S. Buffalo N.Y.

Mr. E.S.: That "jolt" in reverse with a cold engine still on fast idle is really nothing to worry about. It is common on many cars. Your problem with the automatic transmission on changing gears sounds like the beginning of seal leaking in the clutch pack.

Auto Column: I own a 1973 Chrysler Newport. There are several service bulletins issued I would like to obtain or read. None of the local Chrysler-Plymouth dealers has the ones I want. Can you give me the address and department of Chrysler Motors to write to?

C. L. Reece, Longmeadow, Mass.

Mr. Reece: Write to Service Engineering, Chrysler Corp., 26001 Lawrence Ave., Center Line, Mich. 48015. You will have to tell them what particular area of your car you are interested in, such as brakes, transmission, engine, etc.

Auto Column: I can't find where the drain plugs are on the engine block of my '71 LeMans with the 350 V-8. I want to flush the cooling system. Can you help?

Mr. R.A.B., Milwaukee, Wis.

Mr. R.A.B.: The plugs are on the lower side of the block just above the engine oil pan. There are two, one on each side, and are a little difficult to see because they are shrouded by the exhaust manifold and starter motor.

Auto Column: I have a 1975 Chrysler with the 400 cubic inch engine. After it is driven and thoroughly warmed up and then sets for about an hour, it will not start. If I raise the hood for five to 10 minutes, it starts immediately. I would appreciate any information on this problem.

Carl Massung, Haines City, Fla.

Mr. Massung: When you turn off your hot engine, gasoline is vaporizing in the carburetor and probably in the fuel filter, pushing into the intake manifold, causing vapor lock or a flooded manifold. Next time it happens, hold the accelerator to the floor while you crank the engine. Don't pump it. That usually clears up the flooded condition.

New Datsun 810—a top notch sedan

by DOYLE K. GETTER

The new Japanese-built Datsun 810 four-door sedan is one of the best looking, best handling Datsun sedans to come across the Pacific in a long time.

A $5,499 luxury compact in the European sports and touring tradition, the 810 packs a lot of wallop in its performance and can be compared without losing too much in the comparison with imported and domestic cars costing twice as much.

The heart of the 810 is a 146 cubic inch overhead cam inline six, taken from Datsun's legendary 240-Z sports car of the early 1970s, and beefed up to 154 net horsepower with Bosch L-Jetronic fuel injection, the same injection system used by BMW.

THE 810 MEETS U.S. emissions standards while burning regular fuel without a catalytic converter.

The standard transmission is a smooth four-speed manual box that shifts through the slots with ease. It is mounted between the front bucket seats where the emergency brake also is located.

Other standard features included in the basic price include power brakes with discs in front, adjustable steering wheel, a complete set of gauges and function warning lights, tachometer, quartz digital clock, trip odometer in the speedometer, three-speed windshield wipers, electric rear window defroster, six-way adjustable and reclining bucket seats, AM-FM stereo radio and cut-pile carpeting on the floor, kick panels and in the trunk.

The only options on the test car were air conditioning and power steering. They must be bought together and cost $675.

The power steering unit is similar to the one used by Mercedes-Benz and it performs excellently on this lighter car. It transmits so much feel to the driver that you aren't aware of its subtle assist until you must spin the wheel to park.

THE 810 IS A 183.5 inch sedan on a 104.3 inch wheelbase, with front and rear independent suspension. The springs and shocks absorb most wheel bounces, providing a comfortable, smooth and mildly soft ride with no sloppiness in its crisp handling.

Leg room is more than sufficient for anyone in front and there is enough room in back, with a center pull-down armrest, for two medium tall adults.

I averaged 18.8 miles a gallon in 175 miles of normal city and suburban driving and a good 28.6 miles a gallon on a 105 mile highway drive at 55 miles an hour.

It is a hard car to hold to 55 miles an hour because the engine is just as smooth and quiet at 65 to 70 miles an hour as it is at 55.

It would accelerate from zero to 50 miles an hour in 8.6 seconds and from 30 to 50 in 4.6 seconds.

An automatic transmission is available optionally but EPA figures indicate that you lose about six miles a gallon on the highway with the automatic.

THE JAPANESE built Datsun 810 four-door sedan packs a lot of wallop in its performance. Doyle Getter calls it one of the best looking, best handling Datsun sedans to come across the Pacific in a long time.

Exhibitors programming public for big future in home computers

At least 84 companies are willing to stake their futures on consumers' willingness to make their lives easier with home computers.

The 84 exhibitors at the three-day Midwest Personal Computer show at the Holiday-Inn O'Hare in Rosemont are seeking greater exposure for their products.

"Video games was the last big craze and these computers are the coming thing," said Don Land of Commodore Business Machines. Commodore manufactures the PET system that sells for $595.

"WE'RE GETTING to the point where the average person is going to have these available to him and we're looking for exposure," Land said.

And part of grabbing that exposure is to make a brand name unforgettable. Some companies market themselves as small and friendly with names like Apple, PET and KISS.

Other computers emphasize their roots in space-age technology with names like Polymorphic and Noval 760.

Anyone interested in seeing capabilities of personal computers can visit the show between 4 and 10 p.m. today or between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m. Saturday. Admission is $10.

There are do-it-yourself kits available for the handyman who likes to tinker and believes he can put one of the machines together.

BUT THE MAJORITY of exhibits will be ready-made.

ALTHOUGH THEY ARE machines, home computers don't necessarily have to be impersonal objects. They can serve as guests who are able to provide hours of playing games ranging from blackjack to soccer.

They can be part of the household help doing chores such as storing recipes, turning on ovens and making up shopping lists.

And for the businessman they can help out at the store, keeping books and inventory lists in order.

Although most industry people say it will be two years before the home computer is commonplace, it's generally agreed there will be a lot less than 84 companies selling the machines in five years, making the stakes high at this weekend's exhibition.

Business briefs

Foreign trade debt down to $1.7 billion

The nation's foreign trade deficit sharply narrowed to $1.7 billion in September, its best performance since spring, the government said Thursday.

A 14 per cent increase in the value of American-produced goods sold to other nations was the main reason for the dramatic improvement over August's trade imbalance of $2.67 billion, Commerce Dept. analyists said. The export total of $10.9 billion was a historic high.

However, economists saw the September trade picture as an aberration from the over-all trend rather than a signal that the steadily escalating deficit would continue to shrink during the tail-end of 1977 and next year.

Federal budget deficit drops

The federal budget deficit for the past accounting year was $23 billion below administration projections because of reduced federal spending and withdrawal of the $50 rebate, the White House said Thursday.

James McIntyre, acting director of the Office of Management and Budget said the government took in $356.9 billion and spent $401.9 billion.

The $45 billion deficit was a major drop from the new administration's forecast in February of $68 billion. The fiscal 1977 deficit was also an improvement from the $60.6 billion deficit in the Ford administration's final year.

Panasonic headquarters here

Panasonic has announced it will build a 305,000-square-foot Midwest office headquarters on Algonguin Road east of Arlington Heights Road in Arlington Heights. Panasonic, a division of the Matsushita Electronic Corp., will have groundbreaking ceremonies Tuesday at the site. Bennett & Kahnweiler Associates are developers and brokers and Klefstad Engineering Co. Inc., general contractors.

No sex bias: Harris Bank

Harris Bank Pres. Charles M. Bliss Thursday said his bank did not discriminate against its women employes as charged by the U.S. Treasury Dept. "We continue to believe we have been honest and fair in our treatment of all Harris employes," Bliss said at a 10 a.m. press conference. The Treasury Dept. in August ordered the bank to prove it had not discriminated against its women employes. The action marked the first enforcement action by Treasury against a bank in a case involving alleged discrimination.

A study Harris commissioned of its file shows that the salaries of women employes hired between 1972 and 1973 are within 1.6 per cent of the bank's men employes, Bliss said.

President Carter angered members of a congressional "steel caucus" Thursday by refusing to consider their demand for import quotas to help the nation's troubled basic steel industry.

"I think it's incomprehensible that we can let a basic industry go down the tubes," declared Sen. Richard Schweiker, R-Pa., after a meeting with Carter.

He complained that Carter "seems far less concerned with the steel industry problems and far more concerned with our relationships with other countries and the impact it has in other countries."

Robert Strauss, Carter's trade ambassador, responded to Schweiker's complaint by insisting the President would not "be shoved into a simple answer for political gain. ..

Dow Jones rallies for 2nd day

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market went on a roller-coaster ride Thursday but managed to keep its bargain-hunting rally alive for a second consecutive day. Trading was active.

The Dow Jones Industrial Average, which soared 11.87 points Wednesday for its best gain in six months, finished the day ahead 5.20 points at 818.61.

Advances topped declines, 917 to 496.

Big board volume totaled 21,920,000 shares, down from the 24,860,000 traded Wednesday, the heaviest session since late July.

Composite volume of NYSE issues listed on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter at 4 p.m. EDT totaled 24,239,500 shares, compared with 25,890,988 Wednesday.

Prices were higher in active trading of American Stock Exchange and over-the-counter issues.

Tune costly to get a show on road

NEW YORK — Why would anyone invest in a Broadway play? Eight shows out of 10 fail to return even the amount of money the investor put up. Five shows out of 10 don't return a dime. Inflation has raised the cost of mounting a musical by nearly 100 per cent over the past seven years and a nonmusical by nearly 150 per cent. If you're a small investor, you may not even get invited to the opening-night at Sardi's.

On the other hand, one magic hit in 10 can be a gold mine. The rock musical, "Hair," returned more than 4,000 per cent to its investors and profits keep rolling in. "Chorus Line, "Chicago," "Equus" and "Grease" have all paid off nicely. Even a show that fails to break even on Broadway eventually can turn a profit, if it's popular among touring companies and summer stock.

But the game isn't for widows and orphans, unless they're rich. Theater money is "play money."

THE CLIMBING COSTS and narrowing profits of recent years have made shows harder to sell to Broadway's traditional "angels." So, as usually happens when the fat is out of the carcass, smaller investors are being invited to feast. For a nonmusical budgeted modestly at $250,000, you might pay $5,000 in return for a 1 per cent share of the profits. If you're crazy but not that crazy, you could split the 1 per cent among two or three persons. Musicals are budgeted at $500,000 and up.

This year's crop of Broadway openings hasn't yet sent up any rockets, although there's lots of sizzling publicity around Liza Miselli's show, "The Act." One thing seasoned investors have learned, however, is that you can't bank press releases, or even apparent success. Debbie Reynold's show, "Irene," made a bundle for its stars, employes, writers and producers, but costs were so much over budget that investors got nothing.

Anyone who wants to experience a theater investment should write to a successful producer, offering to put up some money for one of his next shows. To find a producer, get a New York newspaper and call some theaters where popular shows are running. Ask for the name of the producer, and write to him or her in care of the theater. One reminder: A famous producer like Hal Prince may not often need the help of small investors to get a show on the road (and if he does, the show may be a loser). But many other producers are always glad to hear from willing victims.

THE DIFFERENCE between success and failure (besides a good show) is control of costs. One theatrical lawyer told Barron's, the investment publication, that angels should stay away from shows that need more than 60 per cent of the seats sold every night just to break even, and from shows that give royalties of more than 15 per cent to their creative people.

A typical deal splits the profits 50-50 between producer and investors, although sometimes you can negotiate a better deal. Profits are defined as the surplus after all production costs, running costs, royalties and other expenses (iscluding loans) are paid.

A little exercise reaps big benefits for senior citizens

by NANCY GOTLER

Three months ago Edna Blomgren's hands were stiffened with painful arthritis and she regularly took medication for her heart.

Today, the 72-year-old Palatine resident no longer needs the medicine and is free of the crippling pain and fear of physical deterioration that growing old often brings.

Her secret? One hour of moderate exercise each week as a member of the Buehler YMCA senior citizens physical fitness program.

"I FEEL LIKE a different person," Mrs. Blomgren said after 14 weeks of workouts. "After my retirement I felt sluggish and had arthritis.

"But the pain I used to have in my hands has left me and the doctor took me off the heart medication," she said. "He said that because of the exercise I was getting I didn't need it anymore."

Program Director Art Michaely said he is not surprised.

"Exercise alleviates a great deal of pain because in many cases it's caused by blockage of blood flow to the affected area," he said. "Working out allows the blood to flow more normally. It also retards senility, often caused by lack of blood flowing to the brain."

THE EIGHT-WEEK exercise program for persons age 60 and older costs $2.25 and is held from 11:30 a.m. to noon on Mondays and Wednesdays. The next session begins Monday, but Michaely said participants may sign up any time at the YMCA, Northwest Highway and Countryside Drive, Palatine.

The program is geared to include a full range of motions using all joints. Participants say the jogging, knee bends and toe touches are rejuvenating.

Participants take their pulse after jogging.

Karl Hermann, 63, of Schaumburg, said the program has helped him lose six pounds and feel better.

"I retired a year-and-a-half ago from a desk job and wanted to get some exercise," he said. "Now I feel terrific."

Helene Chan, 65, of Hoffman Estates, played tennis when she was younger and after retiring earlier this year felt the need for more physical activity.

"I WORKED FOR 30 years and always was active," she said. "When I retired in February, I needed something to keep me going again. If I wasn't in this class I'd be sitting at home, so it's great for me."

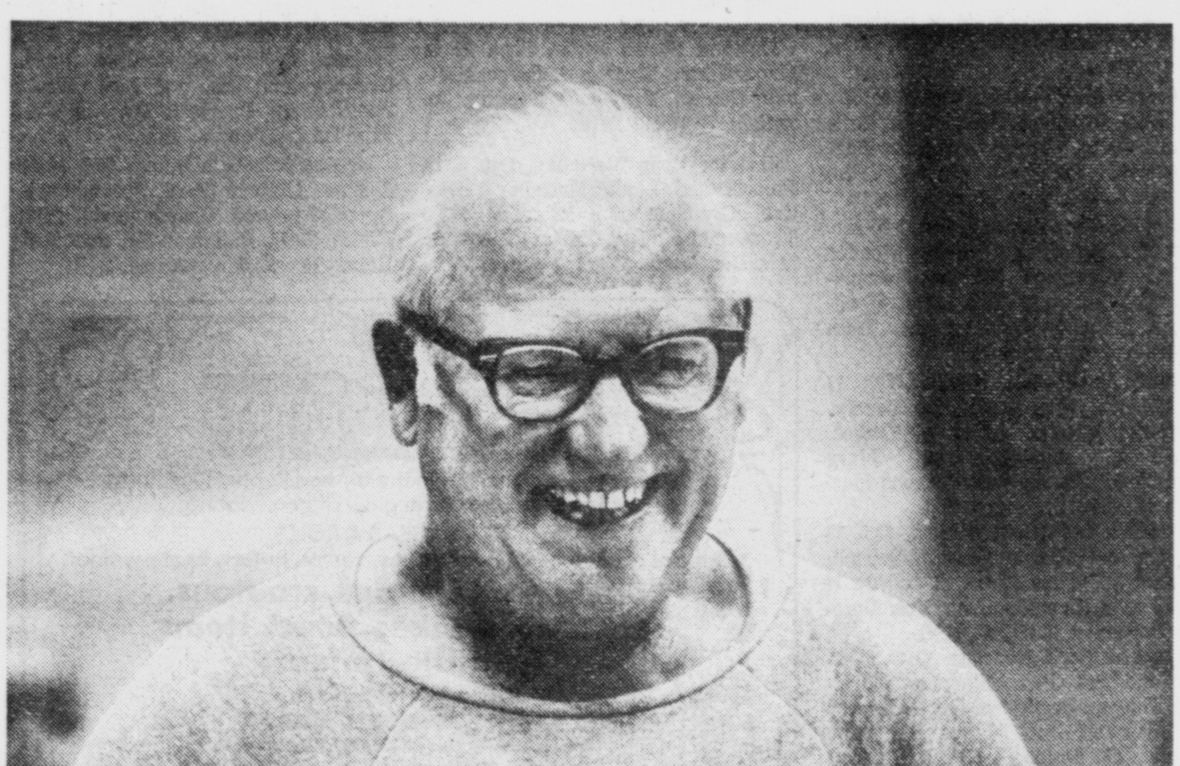
Michaely said the exercises selected put little stress on the chest cavity and help lower the pulse rate.

"At first I was apprehensive about giving them too much to do," he said. "But a friend told me, 'Don't be afraid of seniors, they don't break.' We just gear the intensty down to meet their needs."

Michaely said senior citizens need regular exercise at least as much as younger persons.

"It gives them the ability to do what they want. For example, it has allowed Mrs. Blomgren to ride a bicycle.

"The goal is not longevity," he said. "The goal is a better quality of life for the years they have left."



Karl Hermann makes doing sit ups seem fun.

Instructor Art Michaely leads the group in leg raises.

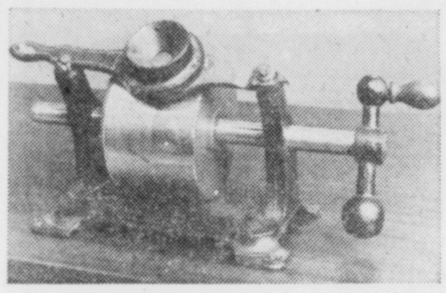
The Berliner gramophone was one of the early disc phonographs on the market.



Edison's original phonograph consisted of a piece of tin foil wrapped around a cylinder.

by LAURA SCHMALBACH

One hundred years ago in a Menlo Park, New Jersey, laboratory, a hard-of-hearing, 30-year-old inventor wrapped a piece of tin foil around a brass cylinder. With his curious assistant looking on, he recited "Mary had a little l a m b'' into the contraption's mouthpiece — and was rewarded with a reasonable facsimile of his voice.

The assistant was numb with surprise, and the young inventor himself said later, "I was never taken so aback. I was always afraid of things that worked the first time."

The object of their amazement was the world's first phonograph, and while proud papa Thomas Alva Edison won't be around to celebrate its centennial birthday, chances are he'd still be taken aback at the progress his talking machine has made since the days of tin foil and brass cylinders.

A dizzying array of turntables, receivers and speakers has replaced Edison's original hand-cranked machine. The recording industry now boasts of 8-track cartridges, quadrophonic sound, video tapes and — slated for 1978 — video discs. While Edison's dream of making the phonograph an educational tool has been realized, the near-deification of recording stars like Elvis Presley and Bing Crosby proves its clout in the entertainment world as well.

BUT IN THE beginning, it was nothing more than the vibrations of a voice causing a stylus to cut groves into the foil-wrapped rotating cylinder. Edison coined the t e r m phonograph, meaning "sound writer," but the "Wizard of Menlo Park" was far from the first to experiment with the idea of reproducing sound. Still, his tin foil contraption did beat out the competition — and even if the sound coming out of the early models was less than perfect, Victorian audiences were entranced.

The phonograph was hailed as Edison's finest invention, and, a year after its conception, it was attracting oohs and ahhs at concert halls, vaudeville theaters and county fairs. Unfortunately, the harsh, grating sound and short life of the tin foil "record" soon disillusioned listeners. Edison turned his creative juices to the invention of the electric light, and his "baby" fell on hard times.

Improvements in the phonograph kept coming, though, even if public interest waned. One of the most important contributions came from German immigrant Emile Berliner. Though Edison himself had toyed with the idea of recording on discs rather than cylinders, he abandoned it. Berliner copyrighted the concept in 1888, and the storage and reproduction advantages of his 7-inch discs would eventually outweigh the superior sound reproduction of the cylinder.

I T WAS THE phenomenal growth of public "phonograph parlors" during the Gay Nineties that once again perked up interest in the "talking machine." Thanks to these early jukeboxes, both Edison's phonograph and Berliner's flat disc "Gramophone" began to appear in homes around the turn of the century.

Another crucial improvement in recording came in 1896, when El-d r i d g e Johnson developed a spring-driven motor that would turn the record at a constant speed — something which was impossible with the earlier hand-cranked models. Johnson and Berliner formed the Victor Talking Machine Company in 1901, and five years later Victor introduced the "Victrola," a record-player that answered housewives' prayers by enclosing the ubiquitous "morning glory" speaking horn in a wooden cabinet.

The dust-catching record player was thus transformed into an acceptable — and popular — living room fixture, and in 1920 Victor and Columbia together sold more than $100 million worth of recordings.

The recordings themselves had come a long way from the early days, when musical numbers with designations like "Comic," "Sentimental" and "Irish" were recorder

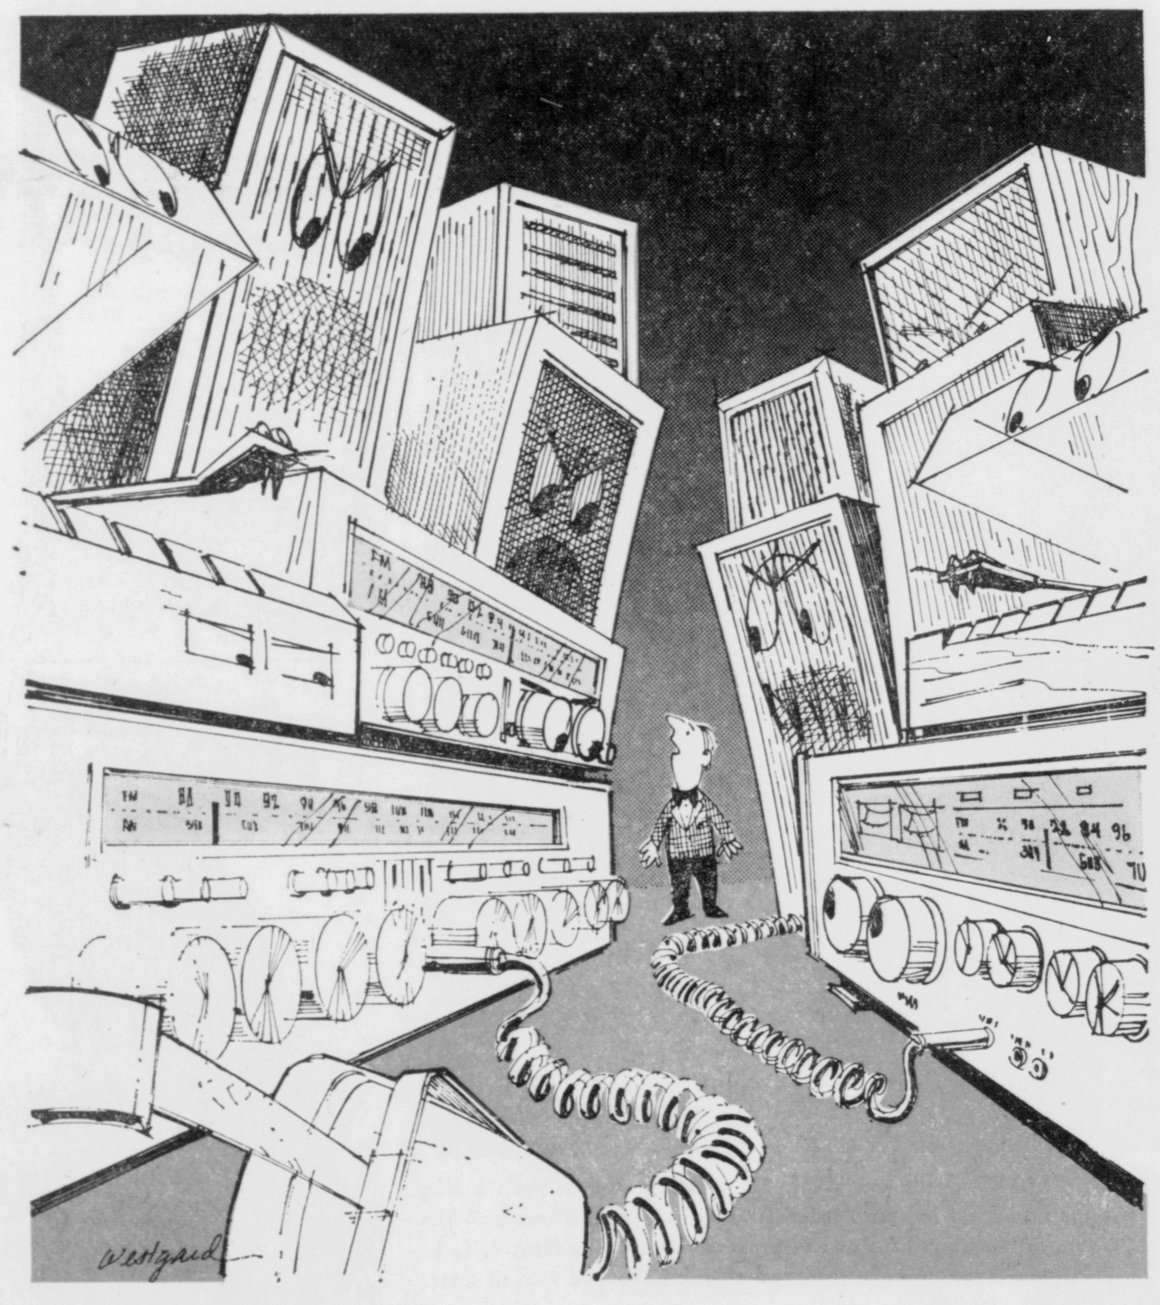
Edison would be amazed at today's stereo array



by BILL GOWEN

Buying a stereo system can be a challenge to even the most experienced music-listener.

First, he has so many from which to choose. Second, he can spend anything from $200 to several thousand dollars. And third, so many variables enter the decision that choosing incorrectly on any can result in a stereo not to the buyer's satisfaction.

A STEREO SYSTEM can be bought in one of three basic types:

- A fully enclosed phonograph and speakers combined with amplifier/tuner in a slick-looking piece of furniture;
- A "semi-component" system in which a turntable is combined with the receiver (tuner and amplifier) along with a separate pair of speakers;
- A fully separate component system.

A stereo system, no matter the type, does a simple task: it takes a program source (record, tape or radio signal), amplifies it and sends it through speakers or headphones. It's that simple.

But buying such a system isn't that simple.

The first decision to be reached is which of the three types of systems you want. Do you want a pretty piece of furniture and don't care that much about how it sounds? Do you want the look of components but don't want to spend from $500 to $5,000? Or do you want the best system, period, and are willing to take out a mortgage to buy it?

Most of the leading department stores carry a line of stereo equipment that fits into each of the first two categories. The leading consumer-electronics companies such as Zenith and Magnavox put out lines of full-furniture stereos or the semi-component types (like the Zenith "Wedge") that retail for $200 to $500.

MANY SMALLER manufacturers exist as well, with products available in most retail or discount stores.

But component systems are gaining favor and within that realm an amazing range of prices exist.

Several area chains of stereo stores offer systems ranging from $165 to $500. Playback and Musicraft are two such outlets with stores throughout the suburban area.

The weakness with this approach is the "packaging" of a system by the store rather than allowing the buyer to put this turntable with that receiver and with so-and-so speakers.

But this is probably the best of all compromises for the consumer. He has been able to buy a good stereo system for an amount within his budget. If he wants to spend more he can "put together" his own system.

When buying any stereo system (or quadriphonic system for the most up-to-date consumer) there are several important guidelines for each component:

LOUDSPEAKERS

The speakers are, arguably, the most important part of the system. With the advances of today's electronics most of the medium-priced receivers (tuners/amplifiers) will faithfully reproduce what is on the record or tape or what is being broadcast.

But the speaker is what the listener hears. If speakers "aren't right," the listener faces long-range problems, such as fatigue.

One thing to remember about speakers: each model will sound unique to the particular person involved. What sounds great to one person may sound poor to another, simply because the human ear varies in sensitivity to sound frequencies.

Anyone buying speakers should not do so without a thorough advance audition.

THE OTHER MAJOR factor in speaker selection is the listening room. How large is it? Are there a lot of reflective surfaces (picture windows) or are there a large number of sound-absorbing materials (drapes, tapestries or furniture)? Each speaker will sound different in a particular environment.

For example, Allison Acoustics makes several models designed for use in corners. The Bose Model 901 uses a reflected-sound principle that needs the proper type of location in relation to the back and side walls.

Speakers can cost anywhere from under $80 apiece to $500 to $1,000 apiece. You'd be surprised at the good sound from inexpensive speakers as long as they're properly located in the room. A smaller speaker will have a firmer bass sound, for example, if it's located on the floor and too-much bass can be cut back by using a wall mount.

TURNTABLE

The turntable, or record-changer, is designed to rotate a record at a fixed speed with as little variation as possible and with as little interference from outside noise as possible.

The buyer has three basic types of record players from which to choose, based on how the power is transmitted from the motor to the platter.

The idler-drive system uses a rubber wheel that contacts the motor shaft with the inside under-edge of the platter. The belt drive system has a continuous belt connecting the motor shaft with the outside of the platter or a ring underneath. This system's strength is the near-complete isolation of all motor vibration from the platter.

The direct-drive system, the current "in" thing among home turntables, uses the motor's shaft as the actual axis of the turntable. The motor thus rotates very slowly. This slow speed acts to keep the vibrations (or "rumble") from reaching the speakers.

AUTOMATIC TURNTABLES, or changers, historically used the idler-drive system and therefore had high rumble levels. But today many of the automatics use belt or direct drive, making their sound reproduction the equal of manual-play systems.

The cartridge is an important adjunct to a turntable. Many turntables utilize a cartridge especially fitted by the manufacturer; others let the buyer choose his own. Prices range from $20 to about $100 for most models, with diamond stylus a necessity for long wear.

Quality turntables vary widely in price, from the Acoustic Research AR-XB for around $150 to the sophisticated Bang & Olufsen Beogram 4200 for just under $700. The latter uses a "straight-line" tracking tone arm, which eliminates such problems as tangential tracking error and skating forces. (Tangential tracking error is the problem inherent in playing back records with a "swinging" pivotal-type tone arm while the grooves were originally cut with a straight-line lathe. "Skating" is the force that tends to pull a pivotal-type arm toward the center of the record, exerting unequal pressure against the inner groove wall. Many turntables thus have an "anti-skating" device to counter this force.)

RECEIVER

The simplest way to go nowadays is to combine all the electronic parts of the system into a receiver, one piece of gear thus including the AM-FM tuner, amplifier and preamplifier. The price range is considerable, from under $200 to more than $2,000.

Be certain the wattage output is right for your speakers and be certain the receiver has all the features you desire. Your dealer should be the best guide, but as a general rule, at least 25 watts per stereo channel (30 watts total) is the minimum for today's speakers with some speakers demanding at least twice that amount.

Don't shy away from Japanese electronics; some of the finest receivers in the world come from that source.

OTHER EQUIPMENT

We've covered the basics, but how about tape players or headphones? Some listeners prefer tapes to records and others, particularly those in apartments, prefer not to break the lease with speakers going full blast.

The tape situation at present is a battle between the cassette and "open-reel" factions with the cassette becoming the favorite.

Cassette decks can cost less than $200 or more than $1,000. Advent, Akai, Sony and Nakamichi make outstanding equipment and what you spend will determine what you get in terms of quality. Cassette players today can feature automatic reverse and nearly all the better systems utilize the Dolby noise suppression system, an electronic means of covering up the "hiss" that used to be the weakness of cassettes because of their slow speed (1-7/8 inches-per-second) and one-eighth-inch width as compared to open reel's faster speeds (up to 7½ IPS) and one-quarter-inch width.

PRE-RECORDED materials also are beginning to become commonplace on cassettes.

Headphones, like speakers, are a very personal item as regards comfort, listening fatigue, etc.

Koss, Superex, Stax, Pioneer, and Sennheiser are among the leading makers, with prices ranging from $30 to $200. Listen first before buying and when listening to either speakers or headphones in a store. Take with one of your own records so that you will hear familiar music.

In buying any of the items, work closely with your local dealer, buy only where you can listen to whatever combination of components you desire and buy where the return and servicing reputation is high.

OTHER THAN BUYING a car, or a house, a stereo system can represent your largest purchase as a consumer in terms of dollars spent.

As you trust a certain realtor or auto dealer, you must build that same confidence in a stereo dealer. Only then will you be confident that your money has been well spent.

'Damnation Alley' good adventure

"Damnation Alley," starring George Peppard, Jan-Michael Vincent, Paul Winfield, Dominique Sanda; directed by Jack Smight; produced by Jerome M. Zeitman and Paul Maslansky; released by Twentieth Century Fox.
Rated PG ★★★

by DANN GIRE

Despite the silly title and well-worn plot, "Damnation Alley," complete with good special effects and unsual sound effects, is a treat for lovers of science fiction and adventure films.

Ten minutes into the picture, the world goes up in a nuclear mushroom after North America is attacked by several hundred enemy missiles. for two years the earth remains encased in a radioactive cloud, knocked off its axis by the power of the nuclear war it has experienced.

Four men, saved from the holocaust by an underground military installation hidden deep in the American desert, climb aboard a top-secret land/water vehicle called a "landmaster" and head off to Albany, N.Y. The group hopes to find the source of a distress radio signal coming from the city by traveling a predetermined course nicknamed "Damnation Alley."

EVER SINCE "Star Wars" set a new standard in filmed special effects, film goers now expect quality in movies which employ them. "Damnation Alley" doesn't disappoint the viewer.

Mutated creatures, cosmic storms, radioactive clouds, thunderous tidal waves, for the most part are well done. And to top it all is a well-employed sound system called "Sound 360 Degrees" which enables a listener to hear sounds from all sides of the theater. It's quite effective at capturing the effect of an atomic blast. The "surround" sound also lends a unique flavor to Jerry Goldsmith's above-average soundtrack.

If the plot sounds trite, it is. But the restraint used by director Jack Smight and the quality of the special effects makes "Damnation Alley" an exceptionally good adventure film for older kids and adults alike.

CHARACTER development was secondary to the action scenes in "D.A.," but Vincent and Peppard each made his own character interestingly distinct without much help from the script. Peppard, armed with a Southern drawl, plays the major, a crusty military man who doesn't care for Tanner (Vincent), a former subordinate of his who prefers the free and easy life of a youthful rebel.

Winfield, as Tanner's friend, is given no chance to solidify his character while Dominique Sanda does little more than provide a feminine profile to the cast of characters.

The quickie television ads promoting the film lead viewers to think that "Damnation Alley" is another low-budget Jules Verne rip-off or some kind of futuristic drag racing movie.

But "Damnation Alley" offers no sex and minimal violence. Clever bits of dialogue are interspersed throughout the film as are low-key portions of suspense. Over-all, it is good adventure that doesn't try to take itself seriously.

Review/movies

'Lincoln' a lemon

"Lincoln Conspiracy" Starring Bradford Dillman, John Anderson and John Dehner; directed by James L. Conway; producednby Charles E. Sellier, Jr.; released by Sunn Classic Pictures. Rated G ★½

by DANN GIRE

Some suburban theaters have kept "Lincoln Conspiracy" a little longer than they had originally intended, citing "popular demand" as the reason.

But if the film is as popular as promoters indicate there must be a lot of Lincoln lovers or history buffs in the area who aren't bothered by the lack of quality in all aspects of the production.

Of course, the purpose in making the film was not to win awards for cinematography or set design, but to reveal "the truth" about the assassination of Abraham Lincoln, according to Sunn Classic Pictures researcher David Balsiger.

IT'S BALSIGER'S contention that John Wilkes Booth was accidentally given easy access to Lincoln at the Ford Theater because high government officials were planning to abduct the president at the same time.

Balsinger also contends that John Wilkes Booth was never captured by troops, who mistook a Confederate conspirator named Capt. James William Boyd for Booth and killed him.

Following the assassination, officials moved quickly to have Boyd's body identified as Booth's to cover up the whole mess and give Booth a chance to leave the country.

WHILE THE CONJECTURE proves interesting, the film itself is not. The movie was filled with unoriginal phrases such as "Treachery raises its ugly head..." and featured scenes that looked as though they were shot with an 8 mm Kodak.

John Anderson, attempting to play a war-weary president, is given silly lines to say as well as an artificial-looking beard that made me wish someone would tug on it, just to see if it stayed in place.

Only Bradford Dillman gives any credibility to his role as Booth, a crazed Confederate sympathizer who plots to get Lincoln several times before he succeeds.

Perhaps the best way to see "Lincoln Conspiracy" is to wait until it's on television — probably in several months. The film will lose nothing in the transition from theater to the tube.

Movie guide

Designed to help readers decide which movies they want to see, this guide includes a listing of movies currently playing the area, plus capsule summaries and comments. Films reviewed are rated excellent, four stars; good, three stars; fair, two stars and poor, one star.

"Bobby Deerfield" — Al Pacino is a race-car driver struggling to find his identity in this melancholy drama. Marthe Keller is the dying woman who brings out the hero's inner self. (PG)

"Looking for Mr. Goodbar" — Diane Keaton stars in this adaptation of Judith Rossner's bestseller. The film misses the book's dark insight into society's nurturing of a woman's self-destructive impulses. Explicit sex and violence. (R)

"One on One" — A young man zooms to college on a basketball scholarship, fails to make the grade and gets in trouble with a mighty mean coach in this likable serio-comic saga. Gym scenes are fun and convincing. Robby Benson stars.(PG)

"Oh God!" — A clever script, a charming George Burns as God and a totally believable John Denver as a modern day Moses who carries God's message to the people makes for a delightful, entertaining film. (PG) ★★★

"You Light Up My Life" — Didi Conn shines as an aspiring singer-songwriter who muddles through romantic and career conflicts and comes out a winner in the end. Old fashioned elements reworked in a "now" setting. (PG) ★★

Recorded sound is 100 years old

Popular recordings like "You'll Never Know a Mother's Love" were made with the singer and musicians bunched up in front of a large recording horn. Every cylinder record produced back then required a separate performance, and positioning of instruments was crucial (tubas and trombones placed close to the horn would drown out the singer).

..THE SINGING of such singing greats as Enrico Caruso, Feodor Chaliapin and John McCormack in the early 1900s and the popularity of World War I songs like "I Didn't Raise My Boy To Be A Soldier" kept record sales humming. It was the introduction of electrical recording in 1925 that made the phonograph more competitive, and for the first time orchestras could be recorded with a reasonable degree of fidelity.

But the hard times of the Great Depression, coupled with radio's increasing lead in home entertainment, suddenly hampered the thriving recording industry. The retail value of records sold in the United States dropped from $75 million in 1929 to $18 million in 1931.

Lew Green, an Arlington Heights resident and musician during the "Golden Age" of the phonograph, remembers those days well: "Records almost became a myth during the depression. . . Edison gave it up in '29, Columbia went bankrupt and Victor almost quit," he recalls.

According to Green, a past president of the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences, it was Bing Crosby and Decca Records that lifted the recording industry out of its doldrums. Der Bingle's renditions of "Sweet Little Annie" and "Please" caught on fast, and the industry started recouping its losses.

INNOVATIONS such as the long-playing record (1948), the advent of tape as a recording medium after World War II and the success of stereo records in the late '50s all helped ensure the popularity of the phonograph, with superstars like the Beatles and Elvis Presley contributing their own brand of magic.

And now, in the 100-year anniversary of Edison's baby, more than 73 million phonographs are in use in the United States. Commemorative stamps have been issued, exhibits planned. But to Lew Green, there's still "not enough awareness of what went on in the past.

"The recording industry will continue to change, but it was always Edison's baby," he says. "He dominated it, and we all owe him a tremendous debt."

Karla Bonoff even better live

by ROB PATTERSON

Karla Bonoff used to say she was too "chicken" to sing lead vocals. Well, that's all changed now. With a chartrising album for security, Karla sang with amazing maturity during a recent appearance at New York's legendary Bottom Line.

"I've always been the kind of person who sat back in the corner and watched others," commented Karla on her past reluctance to perform, "and I learned through their mistakes." Among the folks she watched are Andrew Lonely Boy Gold, Wendy Waldman, Waldman's producer-husband Peter Bernstein and Linda Ronstadt's Stone Poney vet, Kenny Edwards (who produced Karla's album). At the time of Karla's note-taking, all of the above were playing in Bryndel, a highly touted L.A. band, which was unfortunately never caught on vinyl.

A few weeks back I reviewed Karla's album, finding it both powerful and touching. I am pleased to report now that the poignance of her songs is even more affecting live than on disc. This lady not only writes, but lives her songs, and she sings them with more feeling than any interpreter could hope to. If I were to make a personal pick for this fall's most promising talent, I'd have to push my chips Karla's way. The only thing I see between her and stardom is time (and maybe not even much of that).

DISCovering rock

MEANWHILE the vinyl flows like lava:

"Show Some Emotion" — Joan Armatrading — Another lady with a big soul and a lot of songs to capture it. This album has a stunning range — from "Woncha Come on Home," a cross between Leadbelly blues and Afro-Caribbean roots, to the sultry rock of "Kissin' and A' Huggin." It also possesses generous portions of style, intelligence and grace. The best thing out of the West Indies since winter cruises, Joan Armatrading has lived up to her promise with a vengeance.

"Shot in The Dark" — Bill Quateman — Classic guitar-wrenched rock with unswerving aim is Quateman's forte, and the evidence is nowhere more apparent than on his newest LP. His full-bodied songs and searing voice are aptly augmented by a band whose credits read like a rock Who's Who — Little Feat, Elton John, Wings and Bowie. Judge the man by the company he keesp.

"Simple Dreams" — Linda Ronstadt — Sparse, crisp arrangements signal a return to basics for Linda on this LP. It's an environment that further spotlights her soaring vocals on both energized rockers ("Tumbling Dice," "It's So Easy") and mellower country chestnuts ("Blue Bayou" and "Maybe I'm Right"). This addictive album is a confident step forward for Ronstadt, ensuring her place as one of America's preeminent singers.

"Five Times the Sun" — The Dingoes — A reference point for this Australian band's snappy appeal is the laidback rock of the Eagles, Dobies and early Steely Dan, though the Dingoes' energy and precision also has solid doses of rock grit. Managed by the same folks as the Stones and Lynyrd Skynyrd, there's ample evidence here that the Dingoes will soon be just as well known as these confreres. Very soon.

"BAT OUT OF HELL"— Meat Loaf — If you can imagine a classically-influenced meavy-metal British band with a Bela Lugosi-inspired vocalist, you've got a hint of MeatLoaf's trip. With help from Todd Rundgren, Edgar Winter and members of Bruce Springteen's E Street Band, this former "Rocky Horrow Show" star serves up entertaining and very different listening.

"The David Grisman Quintet" — They call this sublime mix of bluegrass, swing and jazz "dawg music." It's not too apt a title since this group's instrumental flair is as supple as a stalking cat. Meteoric stardom may not be in the cards for Grisman's band but they make me feel wonderful every time I listen.

"Talking Heads 77" — Talking Heads — Art pop is the best description of this group's quirky, convoluted approach — both catchy and a wee bit unsettling. My only disappointment with this debut (which combines "nouveau" originality with the classic three minute song) is that the Heads are better live. Out of New York's burgeoning local scene, this is one band to watch.

"Terence Boylan" — A seductive songwriter in the Jackson Brown mold, Boylan transcends his rather apparent influences by composing songs as sweet and smooth as honey. Thankfully, an album that proves mellow isn't always boring.

MORE ALBUM notes: A&M Records has employed the "Frampton Formula" that worked so well for them and released double live LPs by two other hot-to-trots: Nils Lofgren and Peter Allen. That equals four sides of seething guitar rock and two discs of snappy, sophisticated cabaret-based pop. I can think of no two artists more deserving of such a spread.

The disputed Heart album released a few weeks ago — "Magazine" — was called off the market by court order. If you own one of the 30 thousand or so LPs that hit the stores, it may be a collector's item. Stay tuned for details.

I'm going to stop making excuses to my friends for Randy Newman's warped humor and just say that I love "Little Criminals," his latest LP.

Jefferson Starship still in the studio working on a follow-up to "Spitfire."

And . . . remember the name — Elvis Costello.

Smart and saucy, Snaks has richly filling meals

by JOYCE LOFSTROM
Food Editor

From a buttery Bernaise to a cheesy Mornay, sauces top the menu at Snaks Fifth Avenue, 500 N. Rand Rd., Arlington Heights. The restaurant alludes to the prestigious clothing store in name, but Snaks specializes in price. Be it a supper sandwich or a choice from the "stylish" dinner entrees, the menu offers fashionable meals at bargain prices.

The evening begins with a variety of rolls and muffins, baked at the restaurant bakery. without a doubt, the blueberry and bran nuffins are best, topped with a lightly whipped sweetened butter. Continue on with the soup of the day, a rich but delightful addition. A dinner salad of Romaine lettuce topped with creamy Italian dressing of cheese and sesame seed, the house favorite, is a simple but exquisite dinner complement.

Dinner? Shop around for quiches, omelettes and crepes among the lower-priced entrees at $3.45 to $4.25. For a complete dinner with the added bonus of potato or vegetable crepe, choose from the Snaks Fishery or Style Show.

ENTREES INCLUDE Veal Oscar at $5.95; Monk Fish Bearnaise at $4.50; Lobster Puff at $8.50 or Duckling with Orange Sauce at $5.50.

The dinners offer a touch of exquisite eating with more than ample portions of sauces. For variety in texture and taste, choose the potato instead of crepe floating in sauce, with an entree such as Veal Oscar.

A mini-dessert menu offers treats for everyone, such as specialty drinks, pastries, and yogurts. The black forest cherry torte is a must but leave the Cake Fifth Avenue, the house special, behind. For full tummies, Snaks offers a carryout service for their homemade pastries and breads.

Despite the Fifth Avenue meals fashions at Snaks become a question of continuity. A valet parks the car, but his faded jeans and down jacket just don't mesh with the elegant, carpeted entrance beneath the Snaks awning. Waitresses dressed in pancakehouse type uniform offer a noticeable contrast to the waiters, who stroll the aisles in tuxes and ruffled shirts.

Nevertheless, the atmosphere at Snaks is pleasant with paneled walls, muted lighting and good service. Music plays in the background somewhat lively instrumentals in fact, but not at the expense of quiet conversation and an unhurried meal .

FORMERLY Le Gourmet, the French restaurant that was bombed in March 1976, Snaks Fifth Avenue caters to continental tastes. Choices for the calorie conscious are rare, with a Garden Center salad the best deal at $2.95 to $3.50. Count the dressing as one of those over-priced (in calories, that is,) accessories. The All-American will find a hamburger served with salad and cottage fries among the more traditional extras.

Lunch and dinner selections are comparable with most entrees about 50 cents lower at lunch. Luncheon entrees come with soup or salad; sandwiches with salads. Window shoppers or as the menu says, "nibblers" must pay a $1 service charge.

Go to Snaks Fifth Avenue to indulge and enjoy. And if it becomes a regular habit, consider parking the car yourself for before-and-after-dinner exercise.

Featuring:

The doctor says

Low-fat, high-protein chicken good for diet

In your column on "Cholesterol Can Be Confusing" you stated fish, chicken and red meats all contain about 70 milligrams per 100 grams (three-and-a-half ounces). In some articles on foods for people to eat while dieting chicken is mentioned as "a dieter's delight." Would you please comment on the value of chicken?

Since a well-balanced diet should contain either fish, chicken or red meats, it is important to realize they all contain cholesterol. That doesn't mean that you can't use these foods. It means that you shouldn't squander your daily cholesterol allotment on high cholesterol foods that would cause you to have to overly restrict these important food items.

Chicken and young turkeys are both good for a diet. Why? Because the low-fat pieces provide a good source of protein while not adding fat calories to your diet. It is the fat content here that we are interested in, not the cholesterol. The light meat without the skin and fat is a very low-fat food; 100 grams of the raw flesh of fryer chicken (no skin or bone) contain only 100 calories. Of course you must not add fat in preparing it. A whole pound of the raw light meat only would give you 454 calories — one calorie per gram — and at the same time provide more than 90 grams of good protein. The small amount of fat in lean chicken also contains a reasonable amount of polyunsaturated fat and a limited amount of saturated fat.

Half of the battle in preparing a non-fattening diet is how you select and prepare fools. That makss it easier to follow a diet without suffering. You'll find that kitchen power is more effective than will power.

My granddaughter is 18 months old and is having trouble cutting her teeth. Her parents rub whiskey on her gums occasionally when they seem to bother her a lot. I am not sure this is a very good idea. What do you think? Do you have any suggestions as to what else could be tried?

It is an age-old problem. Some children do have difficult eruption. The gingiva (gums) may become inflamed at the area and sometimes there will be a mild infection under a flap of the gingival tissue over the erupting tooth.

Rubbing whisky on the surface will not help. It isn't enough to be absorbed and act as a general anesthetic and I wouldn't recommend that anyway. It won't help the localized infection if there is one either.

The time-honored practice of using a hard blunt object to chew on — a teething object — is still recommended. Also, it is wise to keep the mouth clean. If there is an area of inflammation local treatment by the baby's doctor might be helpful.

The only value in rubbing whisky on the area is to make the parents feel they have tried to do something. That, too, sometimes is important.

Cat shedding problem should end with season

Dear Roberta: Our cat is shedding again. The vet assures us there's nothing wrong with her, and that some cats simply shed more than others. Is there any home remedy to keep her off upholstered furniture? Commercial sprays are more annoying to us than to her. — Bobbie Wolfe

I don't know of an animal repellent that isn't either pungent or likely to damage furniture. Unless you don't object to the smell of moth flakes, which you could put beneath the cushions. Most animals with a sense of smell shy away from moth repellents. In any case, the new bout of shedding probably won't last long. Cats shed seasonally as a rule, needing less fur when the temperature is hot Many scientists also believe that light has a lot to do with this and other animal functions. If yours is an indoor cat, and intense sunlight shines through your windows while the furnace runs and dries the air, the new shedding is understandable. The cat should adjust fairly quickly to the change from cool to warm.

Dear Roberta: For several years I tried to keep the family jack-o-lantern from growing moldy by smearing on lemon juice, ascorbic acid powder, et cetera. All to no avail. Inspired by Electric Company pumpkins on public television, I'm going to be able to cook this year's pumpkin. Because I didn't cut it open. Instead, I cut out triangles for eyes and nose and a mouth from yellow construction paper. Then I painted these with fluorescent yellow paint, and pasted them on the pumpkin. Our jack-o-lantern glows in the evenings, as always in October, on the front porch. — Jerri Noble by VINCENT J. FONTANA, M.D.

Child abuse is physical, mental

(Eighth in a series)

NEW YORK — Countless thousands of American children are being permanently injured, physically and mentally, as a result of physical and psychological abuse inflicted by parents and caretakers.

It is estimated that there are between 30 thousand and 40 thousand cases of truly "battered" children in the United States; at least 100,000 who are being sexually abused and probably 200,000 to 300,000 who are psychologically abused each year.

This epidemic of child abuse kills an estimated 2,000 American children annually.

Dr. Fontana is medical director and pediatrician-in-chief of the New York Foundling Hospital Center for Parent and Child Development. This article is one of a series written in cooperation with the Council on Family Health, a public service group funded by the manufacturers of medicine.

CHILD MALTREATMENT and violent child rearing are becoming more entrenched in our population and are among the most common causes of death in early childhood. These figures are cause for deep concern, especially because the statistics reflect only the documentable portion of an even more widespread phenomenon.

The problem of child abuse concerns men and women equally. Because women tend to be more involved with the day-to-day work of child rearing, however, it is a subject of particular relevance to them.

To deal with this problem, it is important to understand the process and the consequences of child abuse.

When a child is exposed to repeated episodes of violence in the family unit, he or she is likely to grow up with anger and hostility as part of his or her own behavior pattern. This is due to the natural tendency of children to imitate their parents, in this case violent ones. In addition to the hurt of physical battering, the abused child is likely to be starved for love, starved for life and growing up without the crucial element of self-esteem.

This brings us to a second very important point: the battering need not be physical to be damaging to a child.

VERBAL PSYCHOLOGICAL abuse It can take the form of battering with words.

> Remember, if we cannot feel for the children who are now being savaged and scarred, at least let us feel for the kind of future we are shaping for ourselves and our children.

may not cause noticeable physical damage, but the effects can be deep and devastating. Parents who, in place of love and support, continually criticize, demean, reject or ignore a child may be inflicting an especially destructive kind of hurt.

While the child's arm may not be broken, abusive parental anger breaks a child's spirit, seriously impeding the development of self-confidence needed to meet the challenges of personal development and adult life.

A third point, and this is crucial for the well-being of society as a whole, is that most battered children grow up to be the next generation of battering parents, perpetuating a vicious cycle of this violence in our society. The hurt and anger endured by abused children lead to deep feelings of hostility not just toward their parents but toward society in general and may express itself in a range of antisocial and criminal behavior.

To begin to solve this problem what is needed, first and foremost, is a feeling of compassion both for the children and for the parents. Few parents willfully want to injure their own children. However, during stressful situations some parents lose control and strike out at what is closest to them, namely a child.

THE USE OF alcohol and other drugs in our adult population may add to the many stresses and strains of modern life that create the frustrating situations leading to anger and child abuse.

We do know that the common denominator for aggressive parental behavior is a lack of self-control.

Essential to the solution of child abuse is a clear understanding of the role of a parent. "Parenting" is, in fact, a learned ability.

Given not only the problem of child abuse, but also the fragility of the modern family — about half of all marriages end in divorce or separation — perhaps the time has come to set up programs on parenthood in elementary and high schools.

IN THIS WAY the unconscious and occasionally incomplete learning experience at home might be supplemented. Effective parenting must encompass wholesome, sustained parental affection, with acceptance and approval of the child.

Of primary importance, the specific families where abuse takes place must get help. Parents who can realize that they are caught in this problem — and friends and neighbors of families where child abuse takes place — are encouraged to recognize the situation and to take immediate steps.

Consultations with psychologists, psychiatrists and family counselors can be of great benefit for both parents and children.

Caring means human involvement and helping parents before they do damage to themselves and their children. Remember, if we cannot feel for the children who are now being savaged and scarred, at least let us feel for the kind of future we are shaping for ourselves and our children. It is at this level that we must start — on a purely personal, humane, reaching-out level. Anyone can try reaching out to save a child.

Networks spend big in ratings race

The networks are pricing themselves right out of the industry this season and resorting to all sorts of corporate changes in a mad race for ratings.

The dollar figures and shenanigans involved are enough to make any viewer's bloodshot eyeballs roll wildly.

The three networks already are well on their way to spending a record $1 billion on original programming before the season is over, most of which will be special mini-series, movies or docu-dramas.

In the first two weeks of September alone, in what was a jump on the actual start of the 1977-78 season, ABC, NBC and CBS spent a combined $45 million on special programming in an attempt to outdo each other in the ratings.

THE BIG STAKES they are playing for are ratings, profit and pride.

The higher the ratings, the more viewers the network can assure its advertisers. In the case of a popular series or a block buster "big event," the network can charge more for air time.

Where advertisers may pay $50,000 a minute for a losing show, they may pay $180,000 or more for a minute of commercial air time during a top-rated program.

The profits can be as extraordinary as the losses when one considers that an average one-hour episode of a regular television series costs anywhere from $325,000 to $400,000 to produce and a mini-series costs about $750,000 an hour to produce.

Advertisers are expected to spend about $3 billion this season on air time, and while the networks are wrestling for their fair share of the pie, viewers should remember that money actually is coming out of their pocketbooks.

TELEVISION IS not free. The money spent in stores and for services ultimately changes hands between the advertising merchant and the networks, making the cost of doing television business as much a concern to viewers as it is to the programmers.

Although the latest ratings warfare weapon is a costly one, it has been in the making for some time. The trend toward mini-series began in 1975 with ABC's production of "Rich Man, Poor Man," "Eleanor and Franklin" and "Roots."

The cost of success seems to increase with each new project. "Roots," which set new ratings records during its eight consecutive nights, cost $6 million to produce. ABC's most recent mini-series, "Washington: Behind Closed Doors," cost $7.5 million.

The youngest of the three networks, operating on the philosophy you must spend money to make money, became king of the ratings heap last year. By the looks of things, ABC will remain the leader this season.

Six weeks into the new season, ABC has 7 of the 10 most popular television shows, including the top three ratings-getters: "Laverne and Shirley," "Happy Days" and "Charlie's Angels," and 13 of the leading 20 shows.

NBC IS SECOND in the ratings, not with regular series, but with special programming strength. CBS has dropped to third (from a long-time first) in the ratings race with only three of its shows in the top 10 and 5 in the top 20.

NBC is competing like an old miser delirious with spending, with no care of tomorrow, with no bottom to his money bag. It has spent millions on its top-rated specials such as "79 Park Avenue," the Ali-Shaver bout, "In the Matter of Karen Ann Quinlan" and a host of movies.

From the looks of the specials NBC has scheduled for the remainder of the season, the network may be able to maintain its hold on second place despite its weak, almost disgraceful series line-up.

CBS is quite another story. It wasn't long ago that former CBS president and now head of CBS sports Robert Wussler was telling a group of financial analysts that the third place network may turn out to be the most profitable in the future, based on the theory that profits abound when you cut back program costs and attract high revenues from network advertising.

The theory obviously defies ABC's current formula for success and that's why CBS is in trouble. It isn't spending money on back-to-back specials with wild abandon and, although it has the greatest number of new shows on the air this season, they just aren't competitive with ABC.

IN A TYPICAL REACTION, NBC, and especially CBS, have cleaned their corporate houses during the past month or so, as reported in this column. Corporate executives have been reshuffled and CBS has gone so far as to restructure its network divisions in the ABC fashion.

It may be because they are in third place, but CBS executives are insisting this crazy wave of special-program spending can't continue without the networks going broke.

Being the big daddy of television profits, ABC obviously has little to worry about, but Robert E. Mulholland, president of NBC-TV, admits the frantic pace of producing specials will slow down in the months to come out of sheer economic necessity.

But, no network boss is willing to admit that the current interest in special programming is simply a fad that will come and go. It will not.

The networks must be prepared to suffer the consequences of their new spending philosophy. Millions are being spent on specials that, at most, have the potential of a second run.

While the development and production costs of specials are higher than regular series, and the ratings and advertising profit advantages are greater, the potential for making money from reruns is less.

WITHOUT THE SUPPORT of strong regular series, the networks may be picking up profits and ratings points piecemeal, and that, spread over a season, could spell financial loss.

While viewers are enjoying the quality and in depth drama that has come with this new genre, money is moving in and out of the network system in uneven tides.

Just where it will take the industry and the network way of doing business, only time and ledgers will tell.

Mahler's Eighth triumphs again in song of universe

by GILL GOWEN

"Imagine that the universe burst into song. We hear no longer human voices, but those of the planets and suns circling in their orbits." — Gustav Mahler.

That triumph was during the 1910 premiere of his English Symphony, "The Symphony of a Thousand," one year before his death.

Mahler, whose work was appreciated little during his lifetime, received a 30-minute tumultous ovation after conducting the premiere.

Sir George Solti contends the Eighth Symphony is Mahler's greaest work for this reason.

SOLTI AND THE Chicago Symphony Orchestra and Chorus, eight vocal soloists and the Glen Ellyn Children's Chorus relived that 1910 triumph Thursday night in Orchestra Hall.

Using an orchestral-choral ensemble of more than 400, Solti proved that a performance of the "Symphony of a Thousand" can be performed with less than half that number.

According to Mahler scholar Jack Diether, "The greatness of this symphony lies neither in the mammoth forces mustered to create a massive sound nor in the conception which created such forces. Mahler's Symphony No. 8 is the expression not of the feelings of a single man but those of all humanity."

That the Chicago Symphony and Solti have this music in their blood was evidenced by Thursday's concert, the first downtown performance of the Mahler symphony in six years.

From the opening organ pedal tone of the Latin Pentecostal hymn "Veni, Creator Spiritus," orchestra, chorus and soloists were as one, not missing a note as the 23-minute section was sustained through a glorious conclusion.

Review

Ticket information is available at 674-1959.

THE SECOND PART, a German text of the closing scene from Goethe's "Faust," opens with an orchestral adagio and builds, layer upon layer through a scherzo and the closing "mystical chorus" in which all of the forces unite in a hymn of redemption.

Concern had been raised about the advisability of performing the Eighth Symphony in Orchestra Hall because of lack of space and unsuitable acoustics for a work of this size. The 1971 performances were at the Civic Opera House, but Solti found that a poor location acoustically.

The decision to stay at home this week was a wise one.

A 15-foot stage extension solved the space problem and, for once, an electronic organ was audible at Orchestra Hall. Not a pipe-organ to be sure, but an adequate compromise.

The over-all effect was magnificent — a night to remember in Chicago music.

Solti takes the entire cast to New York City for a single performance of the Mahler Eighth next week at Carnegie Hall. Three other concerts also make up the autumn New York tour, with the orchestra returning to Chicago for resumption of subscription concerts Nov. 10.

4 from area in 'Applause'

Four area young people are appearing in the Broadway musical "Applause," to be presented by the Chicagoland Youth Theatrical Troupe weekends Nov. 4 through Dec. 3. The show will be staged at Whitney Young Theatre Arts Center, 1401 W. Jackson Blvd., Chicago.

Marianne Lindsey, Arlington Heights; Ken Gawne and Angela and Michelle Robinson, all of Mount Prospect join 150 high school and college performers in the cast. Ms. Lindsey is in the singing chorus. Gawne and the Robinsons are dancers.

MAKING A GRAND entrance, Dolly Gallagher Levi is played by Carol Channing in "Hello, Dolly" opening Wednesday through Nov. 20 at Arie Crown Theatre, McCormick Place. Eddie Bracken costars. Tickets, 791-6190.

AUTO SHOWCASE '78

a review of all the exciting new 1978 automobiles offered by your Northwest Suburban Auto Dealers

A Daily Herald Exclusive

THE MALIBU Classic is one of three body styles in two series of new size intermediates that emphasize efficiency. The 1978 models are a foot shorter and 540 to 968 pounds lighter than predecessors.

The Malibu: shorter and lighter

Chevrolet Malibu Classic and Malibu models for 1978 are new mid-size passenger cars that offer efficiency and value normally associated wtih larger, more expensive cars.

The new intermediate Chevrolets are the third step in a five-year sequence of design events which are responding to consumer desire for more efficient, economical, comfortable, and good-looking automobiles.

The 1978 Malibu Classic and Malibu series are also considered the most important new entries in Chevrolet's overall plan to resize vehicles because they have the broadest market appeal. They are designed to meet the transportation requirements of a majority of future Chevrolet prospects.

DESIGN PROPORTIONS are shorter and narrower than before, but roomier inside and with more luggage space than the 1977 models. There is more interior headroom and legroom in the coupe and sedan, and in the coupe, more rear hip room and 2.5 inches more rear knee room. Estimated EPA Interior Volume Index shows an increase of 1.5 cubic feet in the sedan and 3.2 cubic feet in the coupe, and there is up to 14 per cent more luggage space.

The new size Malibu Classic and Malibu are available in 2-door coupe, 4-door sedan and 4-door, 2-seat wagon models. Weight is trimmed by 540 pounds on the coupe, 608 pounds on the sedan, and 968 pounds on the wagon. New curb weights are from 3101 to 3267 pounds and the overall weight reduction is from 15 to 23 per cent . . . an even greater per cent reduction than last year's regular-size Chevrolet.

Corresponding mid-size fuel economy improvements boosted by the introduction of a new Chevrolet V6 engine will range from six per cent to nearly 30 per cent. This should translate to an estimated increase for the Chevrolet series of about 2 to 7 miles per gallon.

Chevrolet V6 engine design is in keeping with the current shorter/lighter weight concept and is 3.3 inches shorter than the previous "inline" six and 60 pounds lighter. Derived from the very successful Chevrolet "small block" V8 engine, nearly all internal and external dimensions not affected by removal of two cylinders can be directly related to the V8 design. It is a 90 degree V6 with a cylinder bore of 3.5 inches and stroke of 3.48 inches for a displacement of 200 cubic inches or 3.3 litres.

CYLINDER HEADS and cylinder block are cast iron, and a new "Dual-jet" carburetor is used with a lightweight aluminum intake manifold. Engine efficiency is improved with estimated increases in fuel economy of 10 per cent. A new concept in dynamic engine balance is used to make the powerplant an exceptionally smooth operating V6.

AMC continues protection plan

All 1978 AMC passenger cars are guaranteed under American Motors' exclusive Buyer Protection Plan, which includes the automobile industry's only full warranty.

Under BPP, a 1978 AMC car is covered for 12 months of 12,000 miles, whichever comes first, on the repair or replacement of any part, except tires, which proves defective in material or workmanship without charge for parts or labor. Tires are covered under a separate tire manufacturers' warranty.

Any needed service adjustments, which are not part of normal scheduled maintenance required during the 12-month/12,000-mile period, will be performed by an authorized AMC dealer without charge to the owner.

AMC dealers will provide a free loaner car if "same-day" service cannot be completed or if guarantee repairs require the car to be kept overnight.

The Buyer Protection Plan also includes trip interruption protection providing reimbursement for food and lodging up to $150 if an AMC car owner is 100 miles or more from home and a servicing dealer cannot repair the car the same day.

Subsequent owners are eligible for any unused portion of the guarantee coverage at no additional cost.

In addition, American Motors offers a 12-month/12,000-mile Extended Engine and Drive Train Protection Plan at a nominal cost to the owner of $75. This plan provides for the reapir or replacement of any engine or drive train component, which proves defective in material or workmanship, within 24 months or 24,000 miles from the date of delivery or first use.

Jeep adds changes and options

For 1978, Jeep Corp. continues its tradition of maintaining styling and design continuity while introducing mechanical changes and new options to improve the entire line of four-wheel-drive vehicles.

A completely redesigned heater and ventilation system for all CJ models, increased driver legroom in Wagoneer, Cherokee and truck models and new ambient air engine intake systems in the larger models are among the mechanical advancements incorporated in the 1978 line.

The number of Jeep models remains unchanged from 1977 — in addition to the CJ-5 and CJ-7, they include two and four-door Cherokee sports utility vehicles, the Wagoneer four-door station wagon and three pickup truck models.

To broaden appeal of the Jeep pickup truck series, three special trim packages are offered in 1978 — the Honcho, carried over from 1977; the Golden Eagle (also offered in the CJ series) which was introduced in mid-1977, and the all-new 10-4.

Standard engine for the CJ-5 and CJ-7 is the 232 CID six, while the two-barrel 258 CID six is standard on the J-10 pickup and Cherokee models. The two-barrel 360 CID V-8 continues as standard on the Wagoneer and the J-20 pickup truck.

CAR MAKERS ARE AFTER US. BUT STILL BEHIND US.

Auto manufacturers are working hard on rustproofing. New primers. New application processes.

But no factory rustproofing is as effective as Ziebart rustproofing.

Because Ziebart rustproofs where the factory can't. In the hidden, boxed-in areas created on the assembly line. In places where bolts and welds break the pre-applied primer coat. In the places where rust can get started.

And our unique sealant covers your car's rust-prone metal. It even penetrates welded seams. And it fights rust for years.

We use our patented Ziebart spray tools to get it inside every hidden section the car makers can't reach.

Come to Ziebart for real rustproofing. We will finish the job the factory started.

Buick 1978 saves fuel and smaller

Buick Motor Division has announced its line of cars for 1978, featuring the aerodynamic styling of the new, more fuel efficient intermediate Century models.

"While some models of the new Century and Regal lines are more than a foot shorter and average about 600 pounds lighter, there has been no sacrifice of usable interior room or comfort," said David C. Collier, general manager of Buick and a vice president of General Motors. "In fact, there is more front and rear head and leg room than last year, and the trunk space also has been increased."

The distinctive styling of the 1978 Century line features a gracefully sloping design in the rear, with the rear roof pillar and the trunk lid on the same plane. The result is a bold new aerodynamic design.

The only notchback model in the Buick intermediates is the Regal coupe.

IN THE FRONT, a single headlight design permits a bigger expanse of grille, making the car look wider, although it is nearly seven inches narrower.

The sedans in the Century series are of the six-window design with swing-out rear side windows to provide better ventilation. The windows in the rear doors are fixed and do not roll down.

Mounted on a 108-inch wheelbase, versus 116 inches last year, the Century sedan is 18 inches shorter and about 600 pounds lighter than its 1977 counterpart.

All coupes in the intermediate line are also mounted on an 108-inch wheelbase, versus 112 last year, and are about 14 inches shorter.

THE CENTURY series is available in three distinct lines, the Century Special, Custom and Limited. There also will be a Century sport coupe, featuring special paint treatment, distinctibe body striping and matching body-colored bumpers.

Three wagon models and three Regal coupes round out Buick's intermediate line.

Buick will offer three V-6 engines in 1978, all of them of the new even-firing design. The 3.2 litre (196 cid) V-6 is standard on all intermediate models except the wagons. A 3.8 litre (231 cid) is standard on LeSabre, Skylark and Skyhawk models, and the 3.8 litre turbocharged V-6 is standard on the sport coupes in both the LeSabre and Regal series.

The turbocharged models will be available with either a two- or four-barrel carburetor.

Lincoln-Mercury family bigger

MERCURY ZEPHYR for 1978 offers roominess, agile handling, excellent fuel economy and clean styling. Although the same size as its predecessor — Mercury Comet — the Zepyyr is nearly 300 pounds lighter with more passenger and luggage space.

Lincoln-Mercury dealers for the 1978 model year have their broadest nameplate lineup ever.

Included are a new family of Mercury Zephyrs, which are roomy, fuel-efficient compacts; the Diamond Jubilee Mark V, in recognition of Ford Motor Company's 75th anniversary, and a freshly styled Monarch.

"Our dealers will cover approximately 87 per cent of the automobile market from the sub-compact Bobcat to the Diamond Jubilee Mark V — the most completely equipped luxury car ever offerd by the division," said Walter S. Walla, Ford Motor Company vice president and Lincoln-Mercury Division general manager.

"The Lincoln-Mercury lineup for 1978 includes nine car lines — Bobcat, Capri, Zephyr, Monarch, Cougar, Marquis, Lincoln Continental, Continental Mark V and Versailles — with a total of 28 models.

"In other words, our dealers cover just about the entire market. If a new-car buyer is interested in inexpensive transportation or the maximum in comfort, luxury and convenience, he can find it in a Lincoln-Mercury showroom."

THE FULL RANGE of Zephyr models, which will replace the Mercury Comet in 1978, share a trim 105.5-inch wheelbase. The Zephyr will be available in two-and four-door sedan and station wagon models and a two-door sports coupe to be introduced later in the year.

The Diamond Jubilee Edition of the Continental Mark V, commemorating Ford Motor Company's 75th anniversary, will be the ultimate in personal luxury. It will offer a variety of unique interior and exterior features, and will include as standard equipment many items optional on other Mark Vs.

The 1978 Mercury Monarch will be distinguished by new front-end styling, functional refinements and several new options.

In addition, electronics will play a more important role in 1978 Lincoln-Mercury Cars.

- The Lincoln Versailles will have a new Electronic Engine Control (EEC) system to regulate the ignition timing and exhaust-gas recirculation of its new standard 5.0-liter engine.
- As a running change, the Mercury Bobcat will receive an electronically controlled carburetor and a three-way catalyst on 2.3-liter engines in California models.
- The Continental Mark V will offer an optional "Miles-to-Empty" gauge (standard on the Diamond Jubilee Edition) that will give the driver an estimate of the car's remaining range based on its current fuel supply and speed.
- Two new audio systems — an AM/FM/MPX radio with cassette tape player and a new 40-channel Citizens Band (CB) radio with the controls integrated into a detachable microphone — will be available on most Lincoln-Mercury cars.

Other notable new options will include variable-ratio, power rack-and-pinion steering on the Mercury Zephyrs and Bobcats and an illuminated outside thermometer on the Lincoln Continental, Continental Mark V and Lincoln Versailles.

Five ways
on your car insurance

Drive carefully . . . an accident-free driving record could save 10-30% on your insurance premium.
Investigate the possibility of a good student or drivers education discount.
Discontinue collision coverage on an older car. It may not be worth the cost of insuring it against collision.
Increase the deductible amount on your auto policy.
If you have more than one car, insure them with the same company. You may save as much as 15% on your premium for each car.

Because you cannot afford to be without car insurance, you owe it to yourself to understand how it works. Only in this way can you intelligently decide what you need and how to purchase insurance at the lowest possible cost.

That's why Kemper Insurance Companies have published a booklet on "How to Buy Car Insurance". It will acquaint you with how insurance works by pointing out important facts such as:
Why you need car insurance
What kind of protection you need
How much insurance you need and
How the cost is determined.

Volkswagen has variety for 1978

Volkswagen's 1978 line-up includes gasoline-and diesel-powered Rabbits that are more economical than before, luxurious Dashers and sporty Scirocco with new styling, the voluminous Bus and the classic Beetle Convertible.

According to Environmental Protection Agency figures, the 1978 Rabbit with manual transmission delivers 38 miles per gallon on the highway and 25 mpg in the city — one mile per gallon more than last year's model. The Rabbit Diesel, the EPA's top-rated car, obtains one more mile per gallon over last year too: 53 mpg highway, 40 mpg city.

In addition to the basic Rabbit, two other models are available: the Rabbit "C" with many custom features and the Rabbit "L" with deluxe interior and styling touches. Their interiors feature new instrument panels, and more luxurious upholstery and carpeting.

All Rabbits have a large rear hatch as standard equipment and with the rear seat folded they have a high, wide cargo area of ample size.

Richard L. Mugg, vice president in charge of Volkswagen of America's Volkswagen Division, said, "We are no longer a one-model company.

"We have a range of cars that includes the world's first affordable diesel, with its exceptional economy, a race-proven sports coupe, the practical and elegant Dashers, our much-copied Bus and a four-place Convertible.
